South Side High School
Fort Wayne, Indiana
Volume 61

► Jane Scheffer, Tricia Bailey, and Amy Daley, sophomores, turn to "check out" a passer-by as they discuss plans for Friday night.

... After All These Years

Once again South Side High School opened its doors to another year, with each year beginning a new way of learning. The faces that passed through the halls of our school may all have been different, but the hearts and thoughts of each person were the same as the students who passed through these doors in 1922. Although each was just one of approximately 20,000 students that have entered South Side, we were different; we added our unique personalities and experiences to South Side's history. Through the many years that South has offered itself to students, the ivy-covered building has remained a vision of the strength and virtue that the students and faculty have put into South.

Ivy Day this year marked the forty third that this Senior tradition has been upheld.

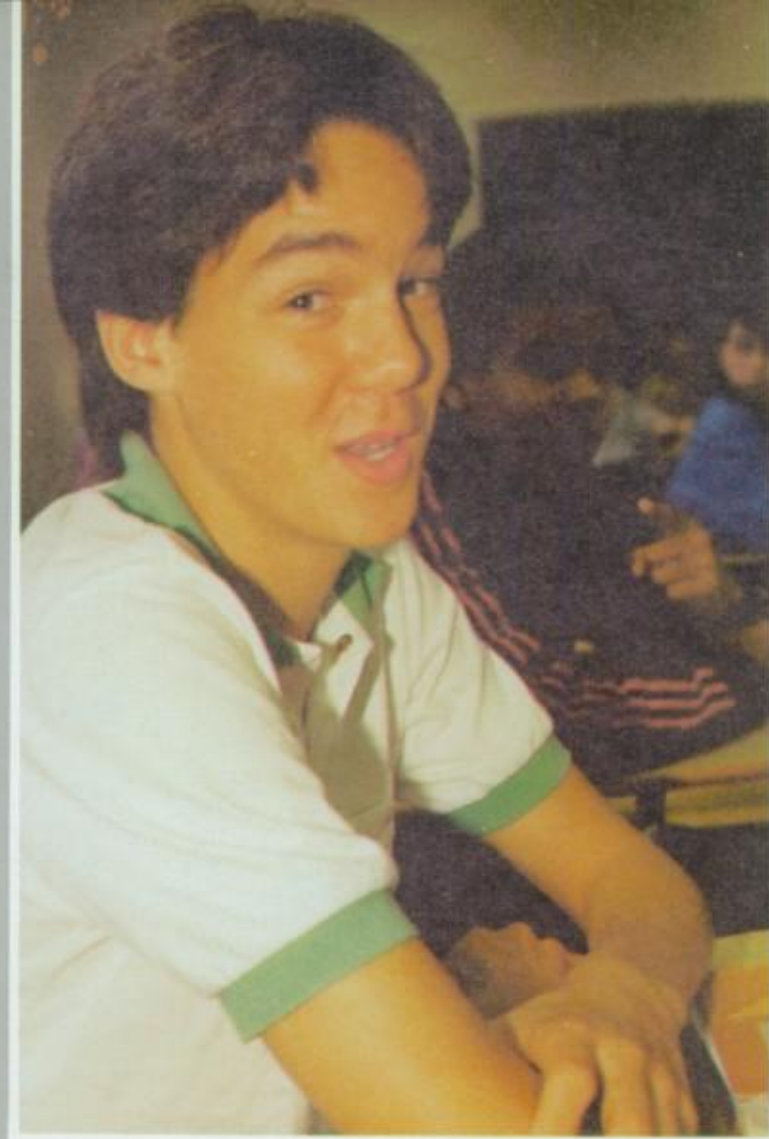

The seniors, all dressed in caps and gowns, knew the next time they would be assembled together as a class would be the afternoon of graduation.

We maintained the respectable reputation of South Side by turning out the largest number of area high school students to help in the flood effort. As always the students' devotion, determination, and passion for the betterment and assistance of their friends, people in need, and the community were displayed.

In sports, as in previous years, the athletes of South Side gave us good reason to be proud of our school. South defeated North Side, enabling us to retain the Totem Pole which we won last year. And the boys' tennis team left its mark in the year of '82 by becoming the conference champion.

Although this may be just another year in the history of South Side, 1982 is a unique and separate year to set apart from all others. We have proven ourselves worthy. We are still here, still strong, still proud ... after all these years.

▼ The "S" shines through as Coach Houk offers the Archer football team a few pointers for the season to come.

Interstate Hallways

"Hey, kid, whatcha waitin' for? Hurry up!" This is something one might hear while walking the halls of South Side from Hoover or maybe a teacher.

During the five-minute passing periods, many things happen in the halls. More often than not, this can be the most hectic part of one's day . . . especially getting through the English hall. The English hall is always crammed with people! Trying to get out of an English class and into the hall is also impossible.

A common sight one might see in the halls are various types of decorations. For the most part, these include spirit posters, or posters announcing upcoming activities. Hungry? There are at least three or four people selling M & M's or candy bars.

But many times, this is where friends stop and talk to each other. They tell each other the latest gossip, make plans for the upcoming evening, or tell them about having too much homework. It surely would be interesting to know what everyone said, if the walls only had ears! Friends whisper secrets, tell jokes and stories while passing classes.

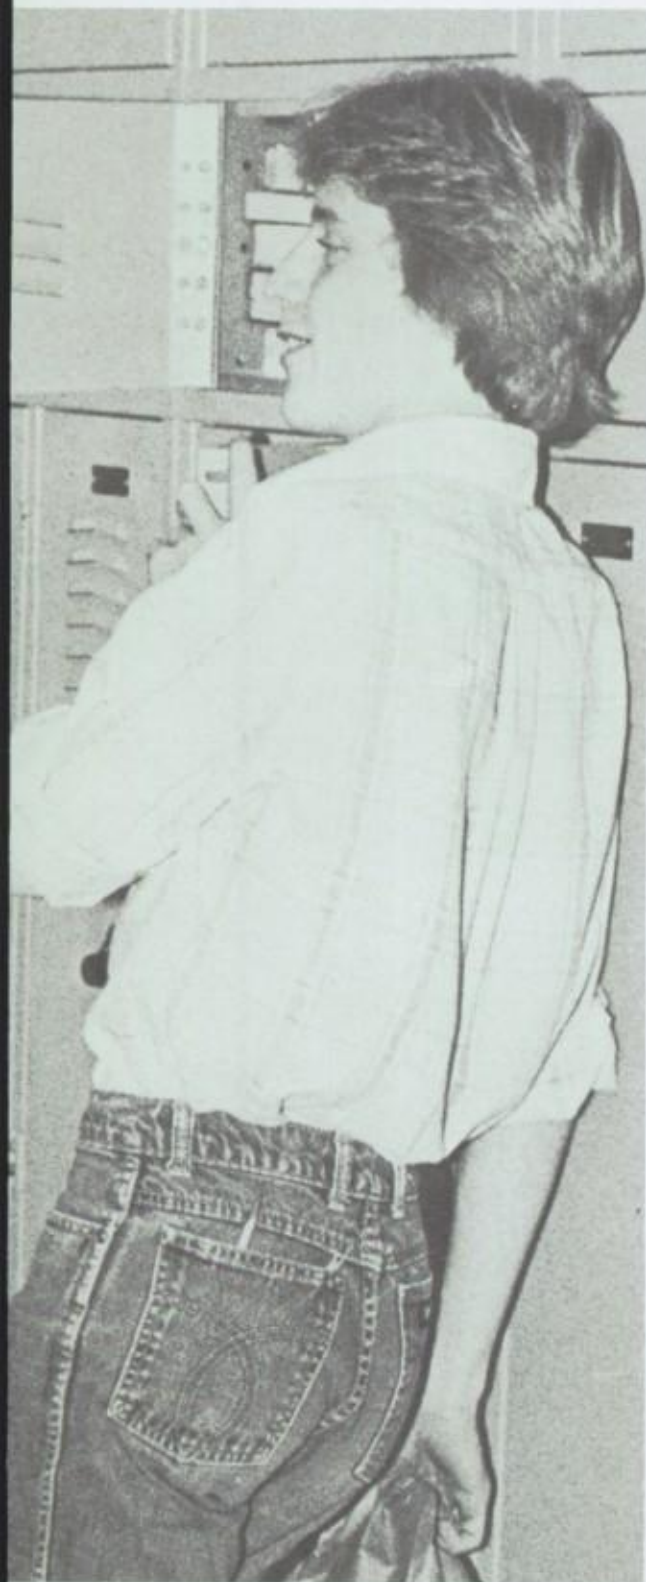

The halls are filled with different types of people, things, and happenings. At times, it might not be the most pleasant part of one's day, but at least it gives students a chance to see their friends and forget their problems for five minutes.

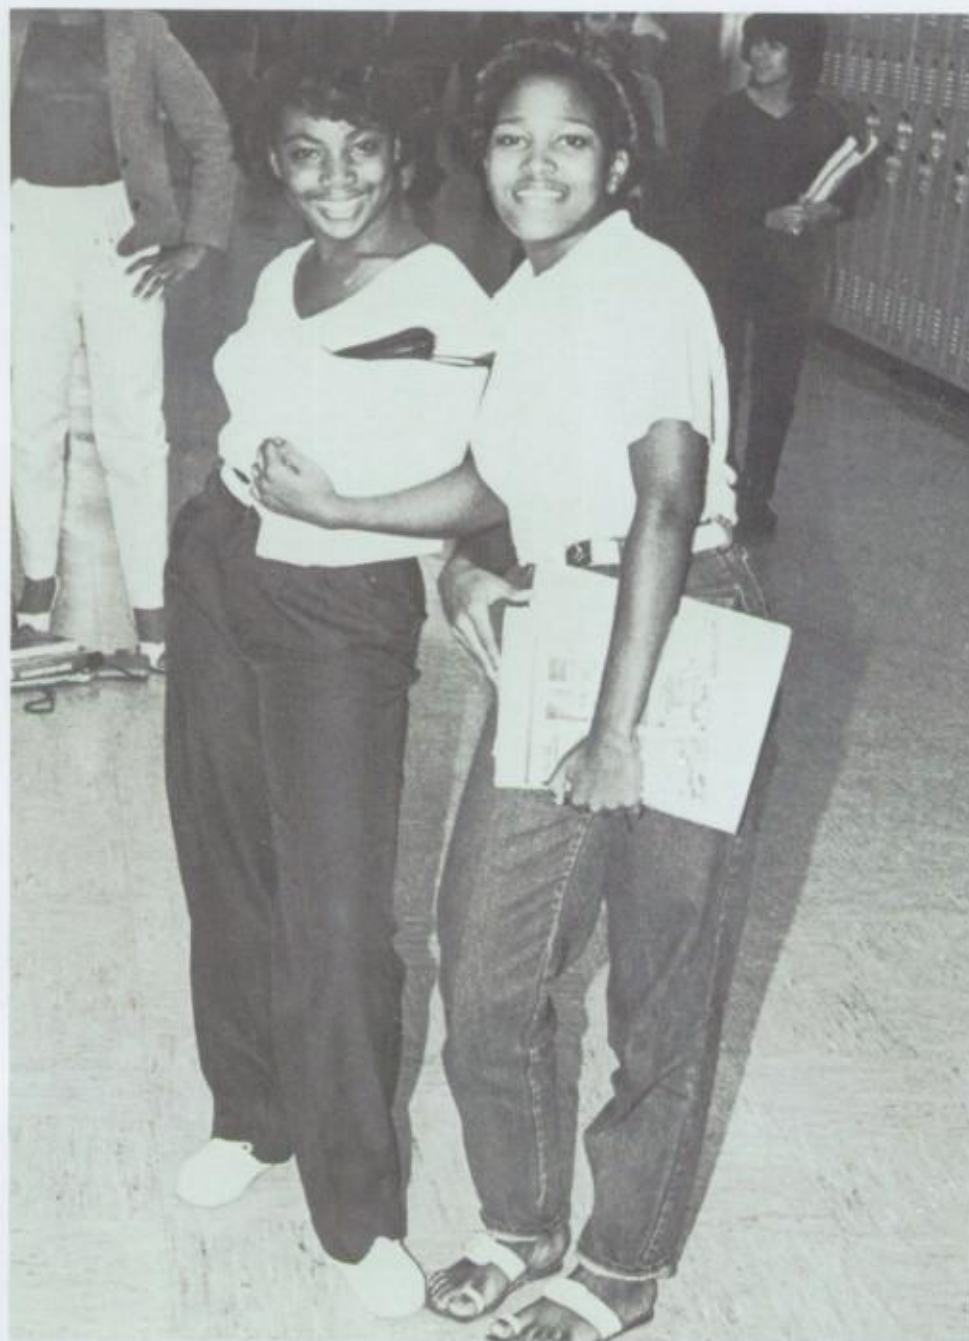

▲ Strolling arm in arm, Karen Nelson and Jeff Leal, seniors, make the five minutes between each class very special.

◀ Jim Stockman, junior, leans against his locker as he tells Curt Blanton, junior, about the good time he had over the weekend.

▼ Ginger Giessler, sophomore, takes time out to talk with a friend as she gathers her books for her next class.

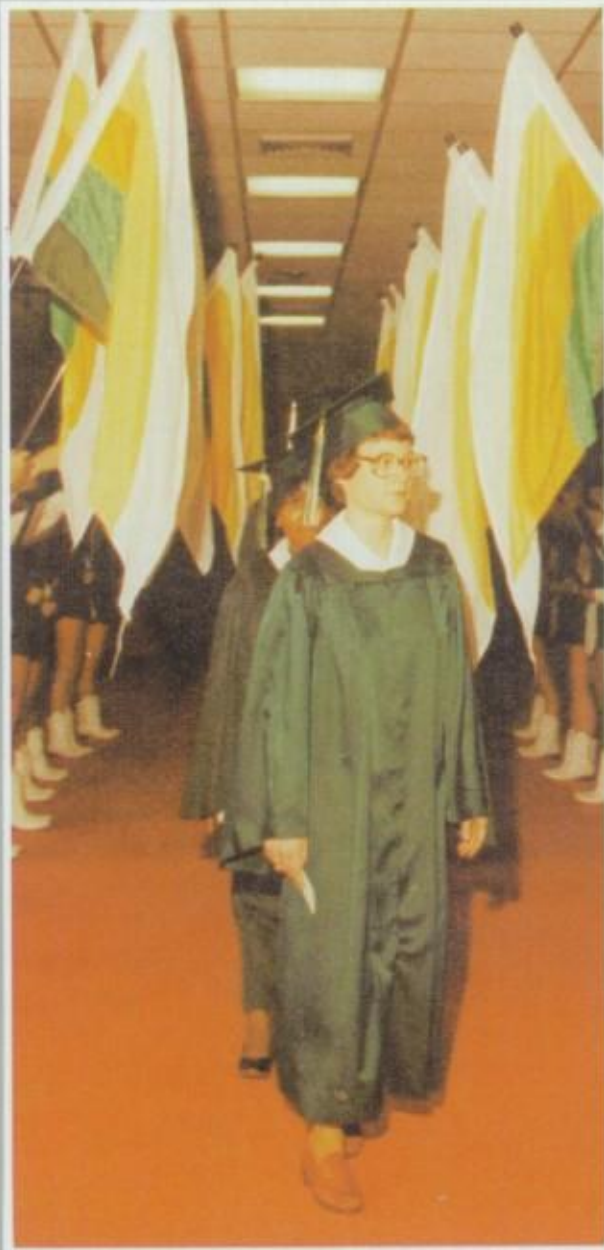

Ivy Day Tradition Survives

There are many schools in Fort Wayne, each one different and alike in many ways. But our school, South Side, has special qualities of its own. For instance, the ivy that inches its way up the sides of our building stands for a very important part of our school. It not only beautifies the walls but symbolizes the years that have passed, because for the past 42 years, the senior class has planted one sprig of ivy as its good-bye to the school.

Annually since the first ceremony long ago, there has been an Ivy Day Parade. Every year in the spring, the seniors are paraded in their caps and gown along Calhoun and Oakdale. Heading the parade are the South Side Marching Band, the Ivy Queen, and her court.

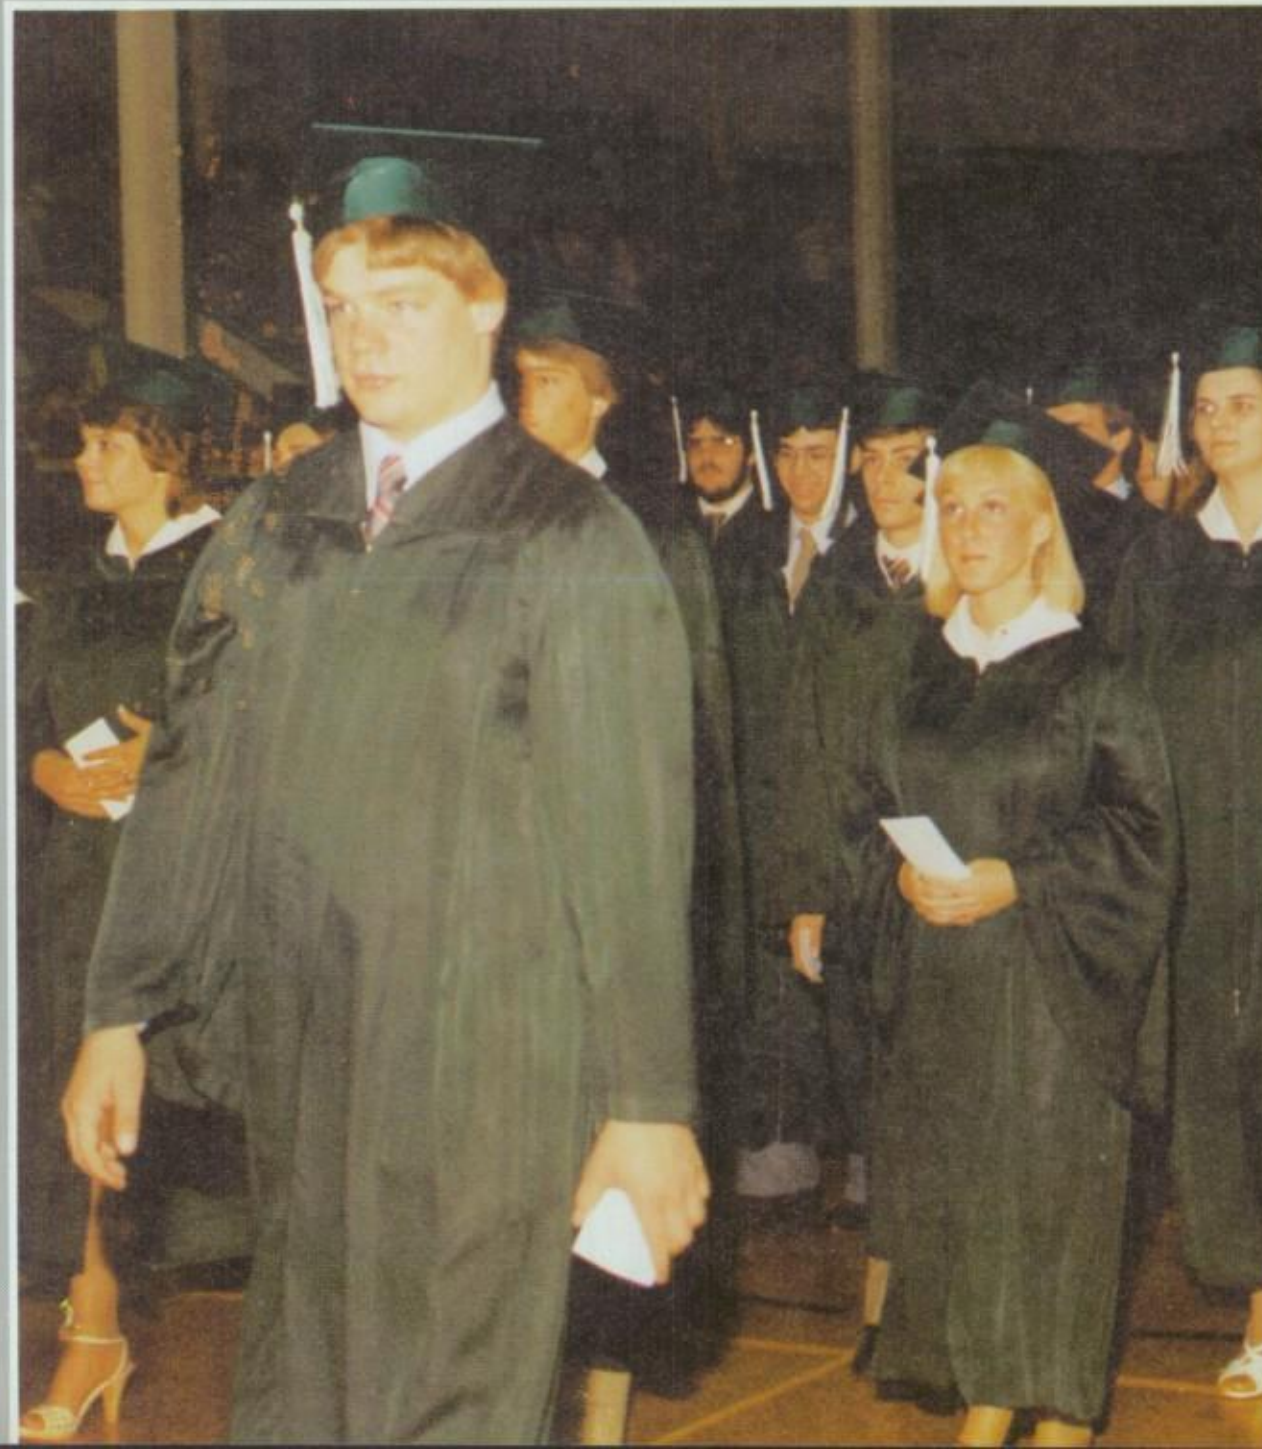

The specialness of the event couldn't be dampened, even by the weather. Even though the storms continued outside, the Class of 1982 still had its special day. For one of the few times in the history of Ivy Day, the gowned seniors, the Ivy Queen and court, and the band marched inside, through the gymnasium while the rest of the school watched.

Dr. Bill Anthis was presented with a vine of ivy by Matt Wildermuth. Greg Watkins was orator, master of ceremonies was Bill Slyby, and Tim Manges crowned Tammy Mendez Ivy Queen. The seniors of 1982 then sang the Alma Mater to end last year's ceremony. The Senior Class officers were then given the honor of planting another year's sprig of ivy for the walls of South Side. Not only did they take part in a tradition unique to our school, but they added a small part of themselves to the walls of South Side.

◀ In cap and gown, Susan Stephens, senior, walks through the arch of green and white flags, curious about the Ivy Day ceremony.

◀ As pretty as a princess, Tammy Mendez, senior, appreciates the honor of her title as Tim Manges, senior, crowns her Ivy Day Queen.

▼ Jennifer Hoagland, Sara Gregory, Amy Zoch, William Slyby, and Sharon Maier, seniors, are given the honor of planting the ivy.

▲ The 1982 Ivy Day Court: Heather Crandell, Natalie Nunez, Tricia Clark, Tammy Mendez, ▲ Jimmy Davis, Amy Zoch, Jennifer Cartmel, and Sara Gregory.

◀ Parading inside, the Senior Class of 1982 marched through the gymnasium rather than down S. Calhoun Street.

We Saved Our City

Fort Wayne is the city that saved itself. In March of 1982, in the worst flood since 1913, the rivers swelled out of their banks and rose into the city, destroying homes and businesses as it inched its way higher. One-third of Fort Wayne's population of 173,000 fought the rising waters by sandbagging. Two-thirds of these were teenagers. President Reagan even helped throw sandbags.

Creeping in the lives of many, the flood forced thousands of people to flee their homes. Some stayed with friends or family, while others had no place to go and were put in emergency shelters at Trinity Episcopal Church and Precious Blood School.

Mayor Moses called for teenagers to help fight the flood and they arrived in large numbers. Many from South Side signed out for the day and went to help with sandbagging. It was the teenagers who saved the city, and they restored the city's faith in the youth.

As we fought the swirling, muddy waters, an entire world watched. Fort Wayne became a major story in newspapers around the globe. Paul Harvey spoke in Fort Wayne with a note of encouragement. Ann Landers dedicated a column to "the youths that saved a city." We even made the Johnny Carson Show.

But all this attention was not just for fun and games. Damage was estimated at 21.8 million dollars. Homes were damaged beyond repair. Businesses lost their inventory. Clean-up began with volunteers from all over. The mayor of Berne sent Berne high school students to Fort Wayne to help with the long process.

The rivers have receded now, and lives are getting back to normal. This is the city that can do anything.

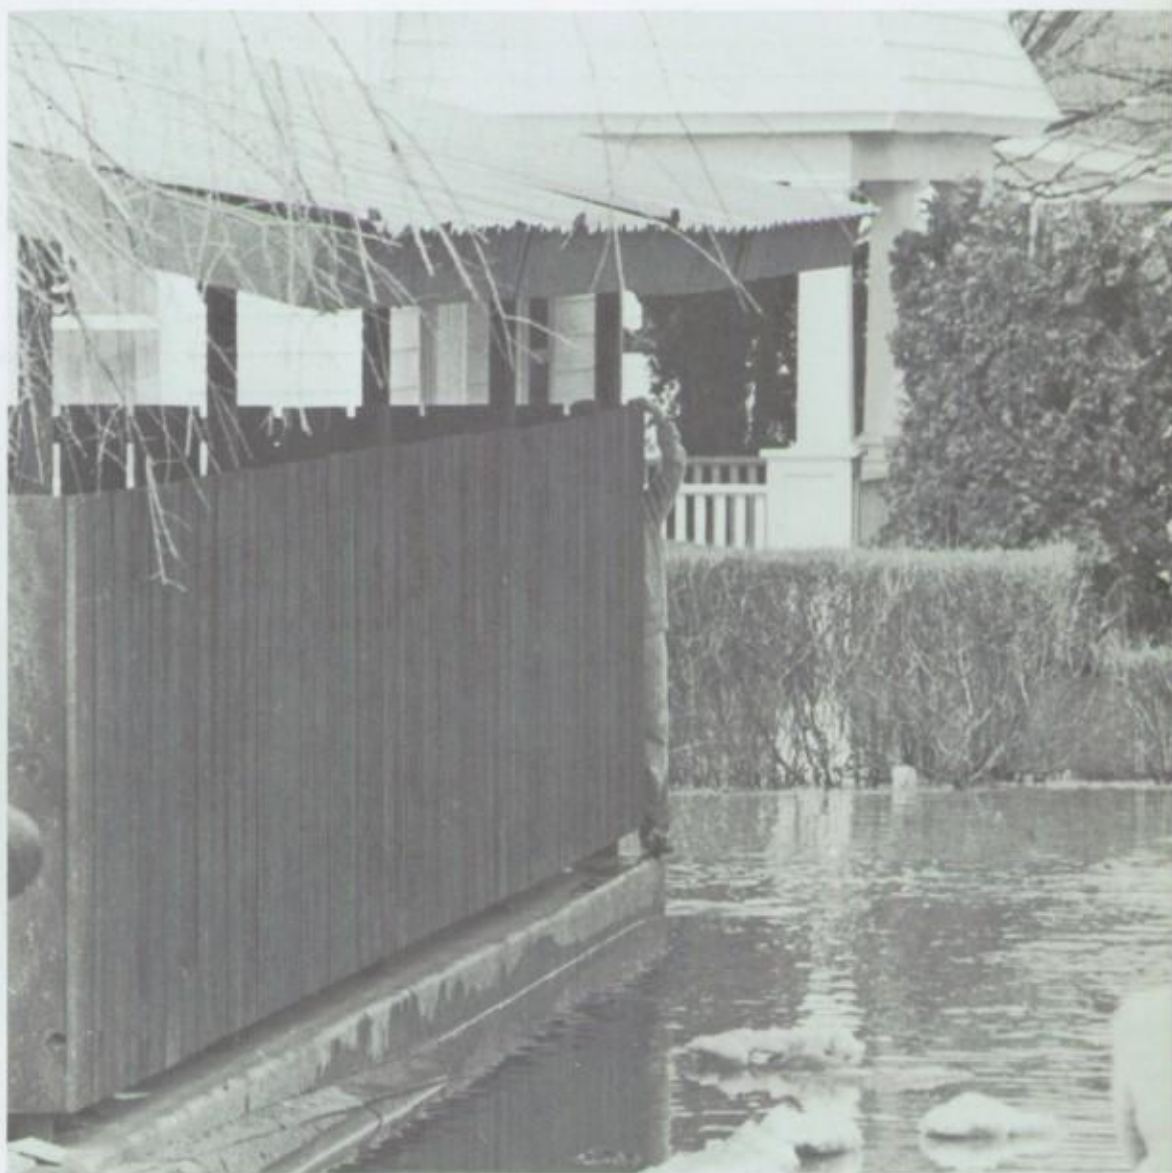

▲ Those living by the St. Mary's River were the first hit by the water levels. H₂O was the factor in the "landscaping" of this house.

◀ This lonely, deserted van waits for its owner to rescue it. Meanwhile, the owner waits for the waters to recede.

▼ Hoping to escape the high waters, this little boy hangs on dearly to the fence, trying to keep his balance on the ledge.

◀ Canoeing was a sport taken up by many, and it was also a vital necessity for transportation around "Port Wayne."

◀ Golfing, jogging, and Sunday drives through the park were unheard of during the long and wet weeks of the Fort Wayne flood.

Lots Of Spirit

South's Tradition

What is green and white and heard all over? South Side spirit! This spirit can be seen as well as heard at many different South Side functions. It is evident that the Archers are proud of their school and are willing to show their spirit at athletic events, pep rallies, and everyday activities.

Spirit weeks give the Archer students a chance to have fun as they support their teams. Punk Rock Day, Lick-em Day, Dress-up Day, College-No-Sweat-Day, and the famous Crazy Green and White Day are some of the favorites.

With the help of the cheerleaders, the spirit of the student body is aroused. This spirit inspires the competitors, instilling confidence and pride in representing their school.

Nothing can satisfy an Archer more than a rowdy and exciting sports event. The enthusiasm of the crowd is carried by the athletes into the competition. Everyone enjoys a victory, but the Archers never let a loss affect their pride. Over the past year, Archer spirit has dominated when the Archers won the Totem Pole for the second year in a row from North Side High School. Another time, the spirit of the Archers was a major factor in gaining a hard-fought victory over Snider High School as the Archers went on to become the S.A.C. tennis tournament champions.

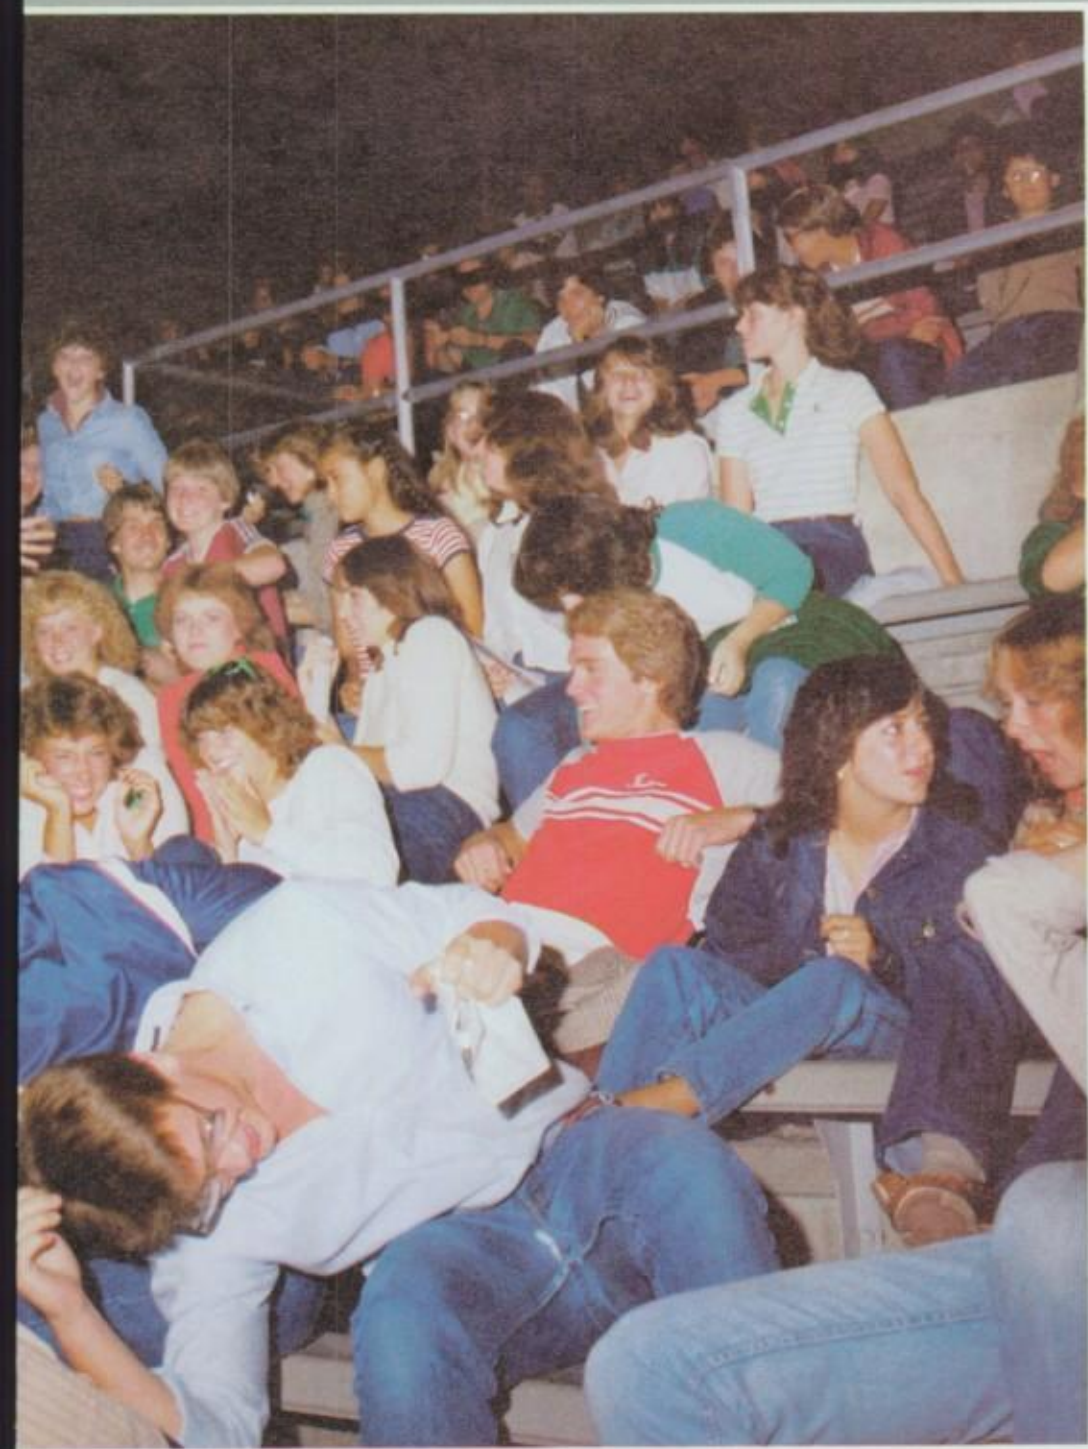

Whether it is the attitude one takes, the clothes one wears, or the cheers one yells, spirit is a necessary asset in keeping South Side's tradition of excellence.

▼ Coaches Fireoved and Bartkiewicz embrace in victory. All the hard work that contributed to success is shown in their expressions.

▲ Mr. Punk himself, Brad Lentz, senior, goes all out on one of the spirit days sponsored by the cheerleaders this year.

◀ During the fall sports pep session, the boys' cross country runners revealed their true personalities for all of South Side to see.

Experience Gained On The Job

A majority of South Side's students hold down part-time jobs after school and on weekends. These jobs provide the money needed for Archers to attend various events throughout the week and on weekends. To some of the students, their job helps to relieve some of the expenses of college.

Our city offers a wide variety of jobs for high school students. Some of these jobs include working for restaurants like McDonalds and Pizza Hut, grocery stores like Rogers and Krogers, gas stations, and clothing stores. Some Archers even have the opportunity of working outdoors.

Not only are students earning money, but they are also learning what it takes to be responsible enough to hold down a job. This opportunity to learn is a great experience for young people. It helps a student learn how to handle responsibility and how to handle money. Knowing these will be a big help for future reference. Above all, the most important factor of having a part-time job is learning to work with and deal with all different kinds of people. Dealing with the kinds of people we do not know is a task that can only be learned through "on the job" experience.

▲ "You look pretty big. Are you sure these will fit?" asks Jeff Wilburn, freshman, of a little boy skater at Bell's Skating Rink.

is one of his many part-time jobs. John erson, senior, works at Speaker World, ed across from South Side.

▼ "Ain't no reason to go anyplace else" says
Roger Miller, senior, as he bags his customer's food at Wendy's Restaurant.

▼ Duane Brockmeyer, junior, greets each customer with a friendly smile. Duane works as a carry-out boy at Scott's Grocery.

stocking the shelves is one of the many jobs
Tom Tigges, senior, performs at his part-time job at Rogers Friendly Markets.

▲ Recognizing a customer, Cathy Powell, senior, cheerfully greets each person. Cathy has worked at Rogers for three years.

▲ "May I help you?" Eve Lyte, senior, gives service with a smile at the home of the Whopper, Burger King.

Summer, Our Style

What do suntans, lakes, vacations, and sleep have in common?

Each is part of the three months spent away from school in the season of the year every Archer anticipates . . . summer.

As "freed" students escape the halls of South Side, their minds are filled with expectations of their upcoming summer. Thoughts of algebra, English, and history are quickly exchanged for those of soap operas, sunbathing, and excitement.

Each Archer has his own idea of summer; yet all have the same thought of three months without teachers and homework.

Some Archers have jobs to earn money for spending and for their futures while others pass their summers in relaxation.

Some Archers also participated in summer sports such as swimming, tennis, and golf, while others went to camp or on vacation.

Various summer events take place throughout the city, one of which is the Three Rivers Festival in July. During this festival, many Archers could be found watching fireworks, raft races, and local bands.

No matter where or how Archers were spending their summers, it seems that when fall was near, Archers were ready and excited to begin the new school year.

◀ "Rum, pum, pum . . ." the sound of the base drum played by Robert Hagler, junior, re-sounds in the quiet summer heat of practice.

▼ The sun sets over a South Side inter-squad practice game as the Archer football team prepares for its up-coming season.

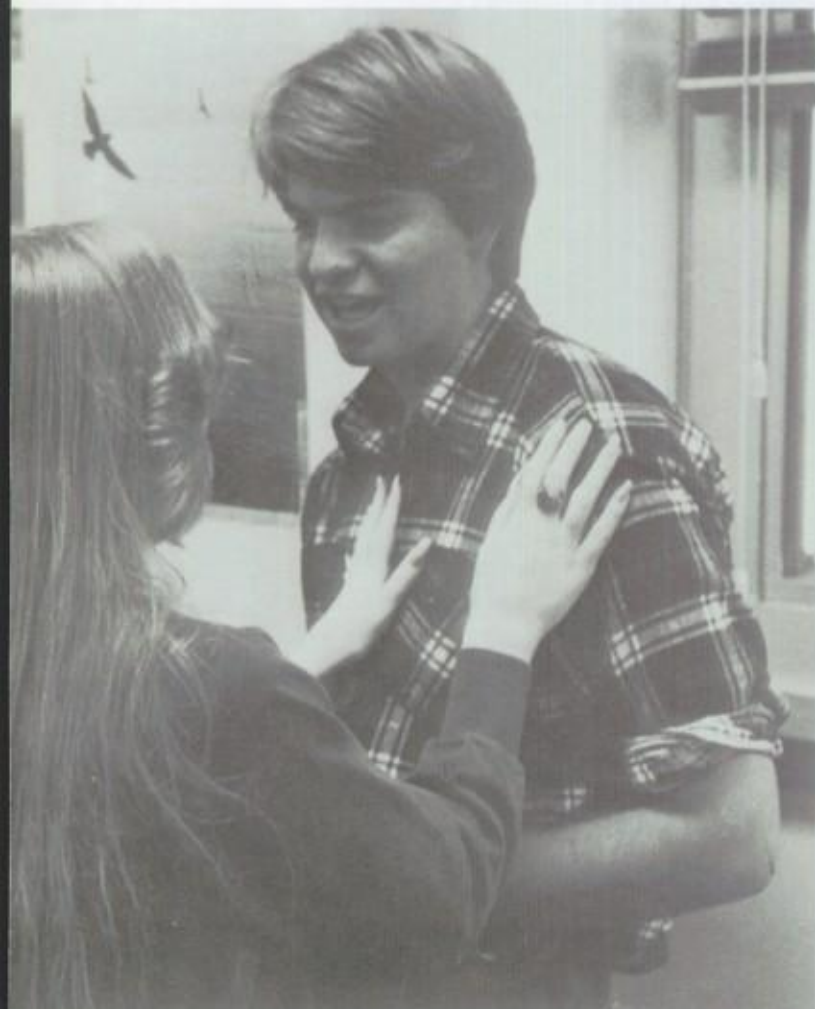

▲ The International Harvester's balloon floats away, foreshadowing the company's future in Fort Wayne.

◀ Wade Smith and Mike Sollberger, seniors, quench their thirst that builds up during long and strenuous two-a-day practices.

► Karen Nelson and Beth Pilditch, seniors, discuss the common problem of choosing which books to take home that night.

▼ "You can't make me do it," laughingly says Phil GiaQuinta, senior, to Vicki Wright, senior, as she uses various methods in asking a favor.

A True Friendship

The school day begins and ends. Day to day is a struggle with exams, homework and classes. But there is something that keeps a person going. There is more to school than just the everyday routine.

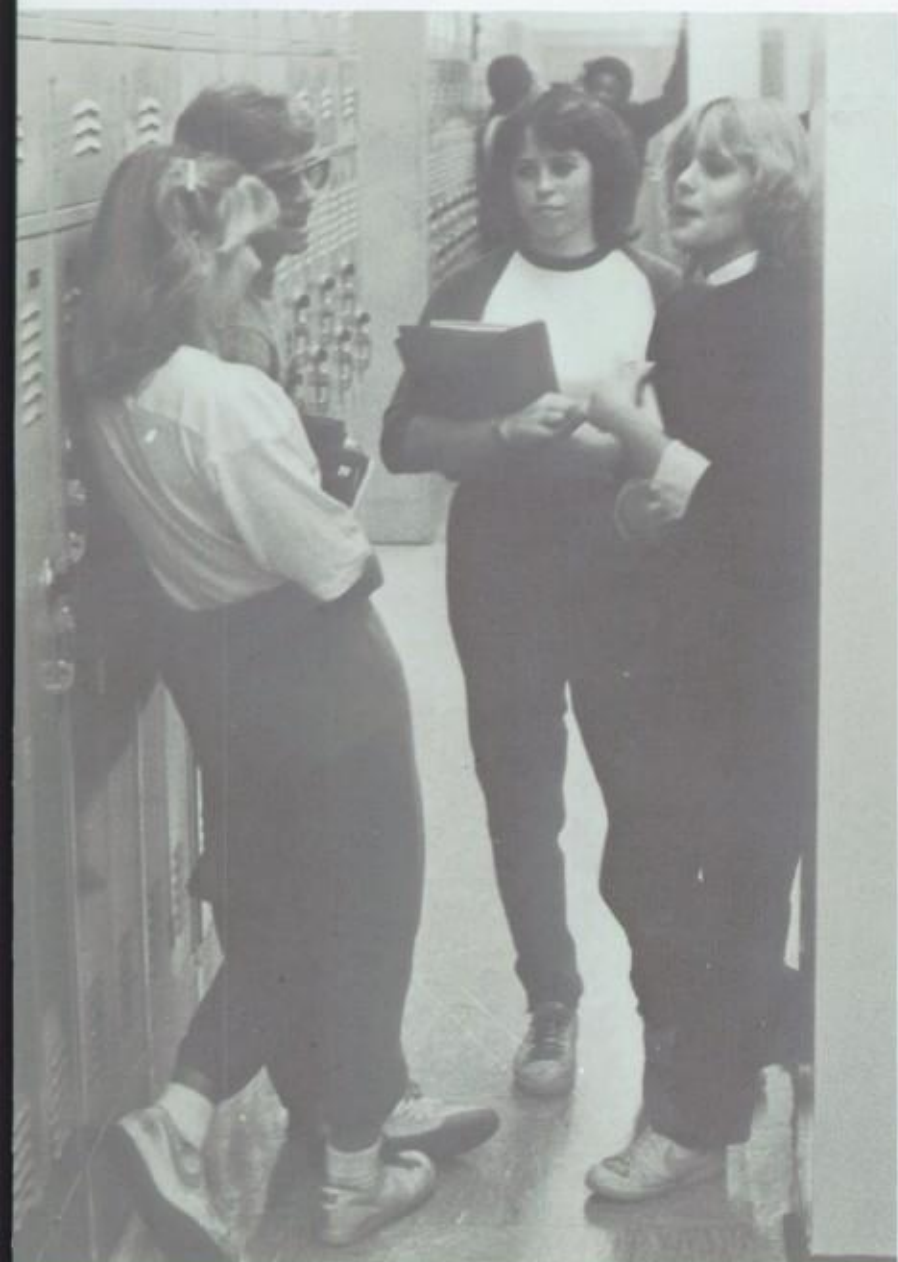

South is filled with a variety of people and personalities. Here anyone can find a friend. Without a joke, a smile, and a bit of laughter shared with a friend, it would be difficult to make it through the long days.

But a friend isn't all fun and games. A friend is someone whom you can count on when you really need him there, when things don't go just right. Hours on the phone, endless evenings spent together, and countless secrets are all involved in a friendship.

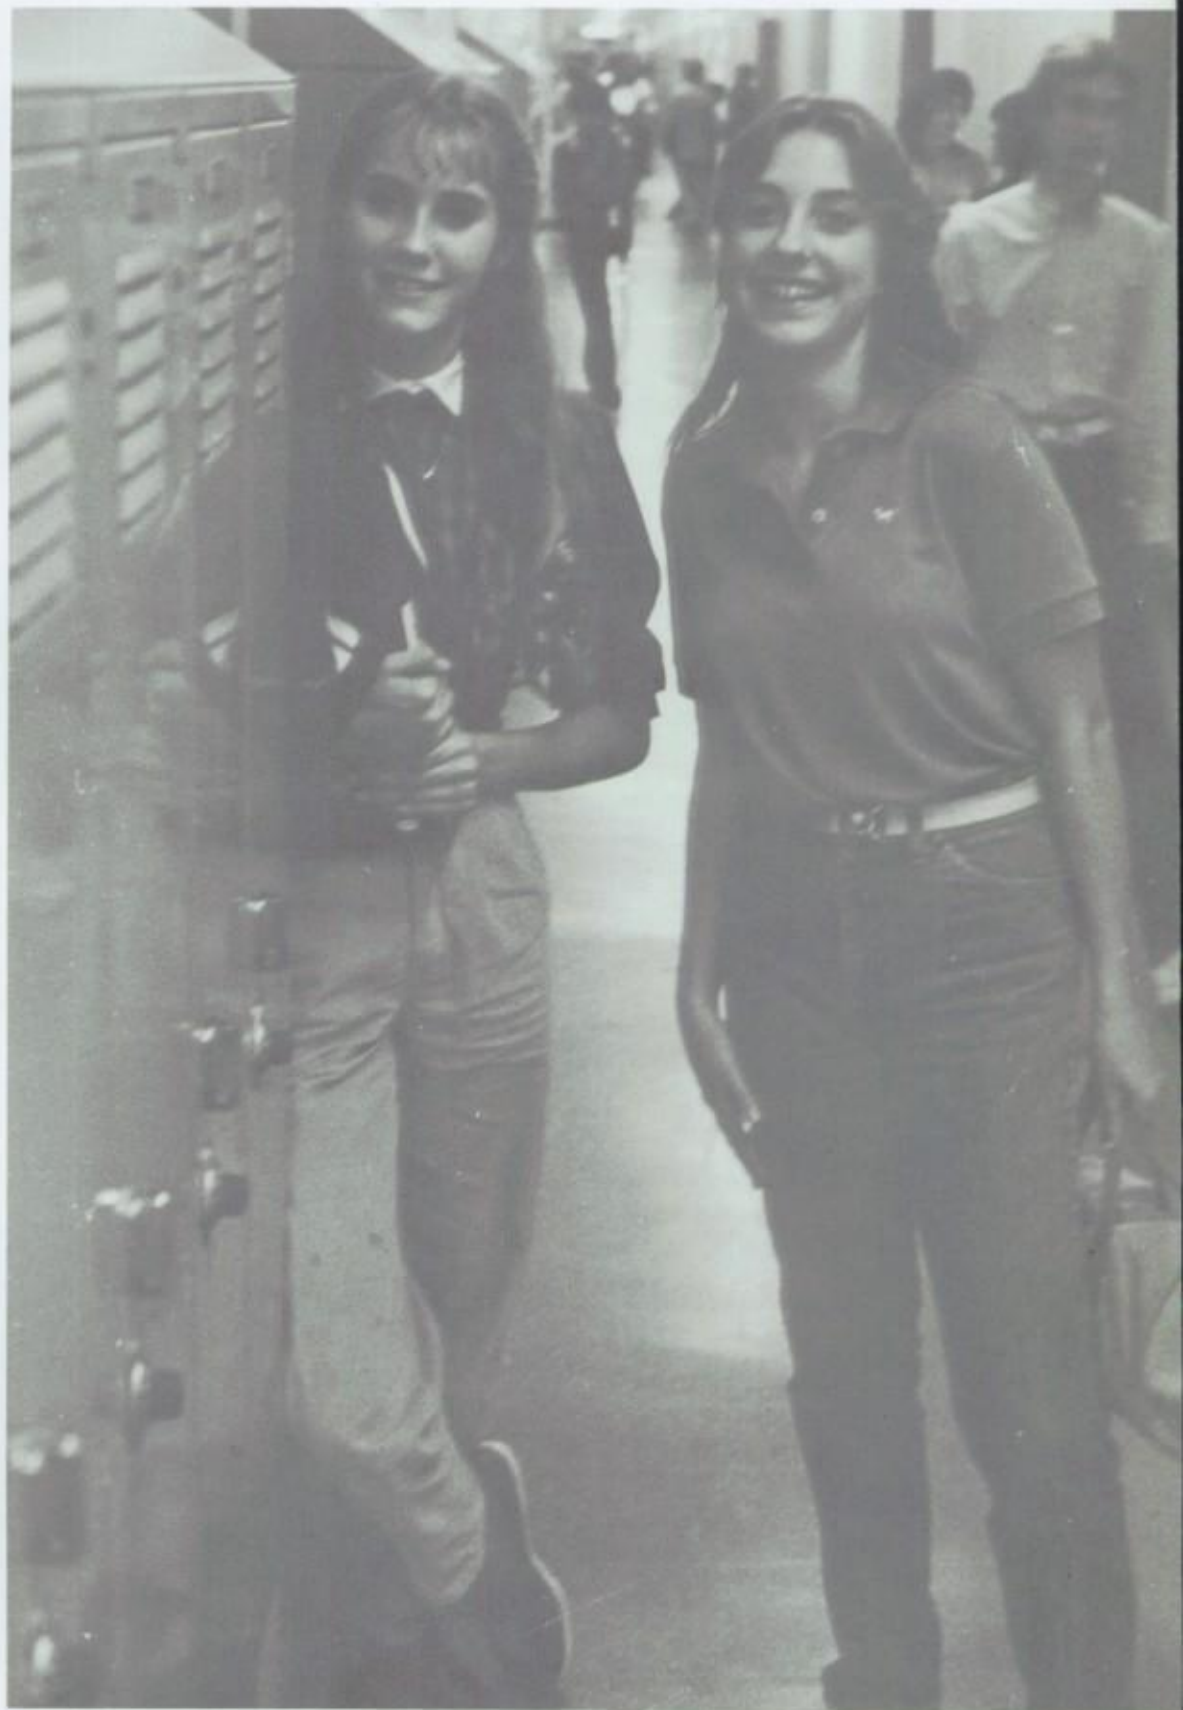

Whether it be one close relationship or many special friends, it is here that one finds smiles and tears, joy, and pain. Imagine school without a giggle among friends, a note passing around the classroom, or someone holding hands. School just wouldn't be the same without all of these. At McDonalds, Pizza Hut, the movies, Links, or Electric Circus, one seldom sees an Archer alone. "Traveling in groups" is always more fun, as can be seen on a weekend night. "I almost live with my friends," said Libby Leal, junior, "There's no one else I'd rather spend my time with, but I guess that's why they're my friends!" Her thoughts may be the same as many other Archers'.

So look beside you. There you will find a friend. Though high school can't last forever, there is one thing that can. A true friendship never ends, no matter how long the years become.

▲ Mindy Pape and Maria Plunkett, freshmen, attempt to hide behind their lockers in fear of a rushing crowd of upperclassmen.

◀ Debbie Incremona, Steve Jackson, and Vida Morris, seniors, relax together during the short lunch period.

Hard Work Pays Off

Seniors and underclassmen sported their Sunday best for one of the few Sundays spent at school. Whether each individual student was receiving an award or not, many South Side students and their parents attended the 1982 Recognition ceremony.

Recognition Day is a time spent rewarding well-deserving students in areas in which the recipients prove to be outstanding.

Theresa Jewett, senior, accepted the award for Valedictorian of the South Side 1982 class. Robert Toy, senior, shared in the honors as he received the Salutatorian award.

Eleven senior students were named South Side Scholars by Mr. Jack Weicker, principal. Patricia Clark, Curt Inman, Tammy LaRue, Tim Manges, Jenny Marquart, Brian Mast, Tammy Mandez, Natalie Nunez, Tom Osha, Susan Stephen, and Jeff Trammel earned a three-year average of 95 percent or better.

The top underclassmen were awarded honors for their individual academic achievements. These students were John Gevers, junior, Kathleen Clark, sophomore, and Ernest Stalnaker, freshman.

After closing with the Alma Mater, the hard-working students departed. Many left filled with ambition because of the support they had been given. Clark commented, "All the hard work seems a little more worth it after I've walked across the stage to receive my award."

▲ Who's next? Schelgel, Anderson, Sauerwein, and Bleich, juniors, feel pride as they await the call of their own names.

► Pausing for a few moments to think over the significance of each award, Bob Toy, senior, gazes down at his trophies.

◀ Ann Belbutoski, sophomore, happily accepts the award for best French student, presented by teacher, Miss Lois Holtmeyer.

▼ Teresa Jewett, senior, accepts an award for top honors in academics. She was named Valedictorian of the 1982 class.

▲ "This is great!" says Todd Heemsoth, junior, as he bags the award of top Algebra 3-4 student, from Mr. Richard Sage.

◀ Very impressive! For outstanding achievement in athletics, Trina Flowers and Phillip Birchfield, seniors, receive their Blanket Awards.

► Miss Anne White, adviser, congratulates a teary-eyed and very proud Patty Ashman, editor, on a job well done.

▲ Pleased with themselves, the new Quill and Scroll members stand up to accept their pins at the 1982 banquet.

Staffs Are Honored

On May 20, 1982, Quill and Scroll added 12 new members to its national population. The new members awarded for their dedication in the publications department were Patty Ashman, Mike Benninghoff, Tricia Mark, Matt Didier, Danny Fogel, Robby Hutner, Amy Rodenbeck, Billy Slyby, Bob Toy, Greg Watkins, Matt Wildermuth, and Amy Zoch. Miss Anne White, the Times and Totem adviser, presented those awards and others to the many other outstanding journalists and photographers on the two publications' staffs.

The evening began with dinner, which was then followed by an awards presentation that included the presentation of mock gifts given by Ashman, editor-in-chief of the Totem, and Toy, editor-in-chief of the Times, to their staffs.

The presentation of the awards was then followed by the "unveiling" of the yearbook, which none had previously seen.

The evening was capped off with the naming of Karen Gemmer, junior, as the new editor-in-chief of the Totem, and John Gevers, junior, as the new editor-in-chief of the Times.

The best writers were Laura Fiedler, junior, and Matt Wildermuth, senior. Sharing the award for the best photographers were John Sanderson, junior, and Todd Anderson, sophomore.

▲ Although not quite the proposal she wants, Laura Fiedler, junior, sweetly accepts a Santa Gram from Times Editor Bob Toy, senior.

◀ Being the first students to view the new Totem is one of the honors given to the Times and Totem staffs.

A 'Summer Breeze'

Over the years the annual Afro-American Club Talent Shows have gained a reputation for excellence, and the 1982 production was no exception. The show, entitled "Summer Breeze," loosely followed the story line of "Grease." Rocky Thompson, senior, and Bonita Johnson, junior, played the leading roles of Danny and Sandy.

Auditions for spots began in December. From the final cuts in February until the actual production, nearly three months later, the carefully chosen cast members rehearsed for hours daily in order to perfect their routines of song, dance, and modeling.

In the end, however, all agreed the long hours of preparation were worth it. The long hours made the show a huge success, with the sell out audience as well as the participants.

As Tonya King, junior, a model in the talent show, said in her own words, "We worked on everything, our posture, our walk, our stance . . . but it was worth it. Besides being fun and exciting, it was a very challenging experience. I really enjoyed it, and I'm looking forward to next year!"

The face and voice of Trina Thompson, senior, clearly express her emotions as she forms the number "I'm in Love."

▲ A thank-you to the ushers, Long, King, G. Pennington, Littlejohn, F. Pennington, Goodman, and Starks.

► From the glow of the lantern above to the music all around, these lucky South Side couples enjoy one another's company.

▲ Prom couple, Lisa Harter and Larry Cavender, juniors, were the lucky winners of the "Dream Prom." They enjoyed their courtesy dinner.

► Bon Voyage! Rich Deister, Brad Howard, and Mark Meredith, juniors, set sail with their dates into a night full of memories.

▼ "Sail On," the theme of the 1982 prom, was enjoyed by the many couples who attended. The after-prom was at The Lantern.

▲ Three couples pause to discuss their plans for the rest of the night beside the lighthouse, which reflected last year's theme, "Sail On."

◀ Gazing into each other's eyes, these three couples reflect the special feelings one experiences on the evening of the Prom.

▼ Standing at the foot of the bridge, Lisa Baker and Bob Schloss, seniors, look forward to a night of fun and romance.

Bon Voyage!

It's 6:00 p.m. and the doorbell rings. "He's here!" Mother yells up the stairs. A 17-year-old girl smooths her dress, takes a deep breath, and then begins her evening. The occasion? The 1982 Junior-Senior Prom. As teenage couples made their way to formal or even their Sunday best, many thought ahead of how the evening would turn out for them. The South Side Prom is a special event for many. But for one couple, this prom night was a little different. Lisa Carter and her date, Larry Cavender, seniors, were awarded a free prom night with everything paid for, including a limousine and a diamond necklace. The contest was put on by a local radio station. "I was at the library when some friends told me they heard it on the radio. I thought they were joking!"

South students danced, chatted, and enjoyed themselves to the music of the Sunrise Band in the IU-PU Ballroom. But after the Prom had ended the evening was far from over. The After-Prom was held at The Lantern, where everyone romanced in a more casual atmosphere.

As the night dwindled away, many sleepy-eyed teenagers reluctantly made their way home again. Unpinning the now-wilted corsages, the girls crawled into bed to dream about the past romance-filled hours of a perfect evening.

► "I'm Herbert!" The wrath of Billy Slyby, senior, falls over the audience in a well-done skit during the performance.

▼ "She's my sister," sing these two lovely ladies, but off stage they're Katy Westropp and Heather Krandell, seniors.

▲ "Sky sure is white," says Tricia Clark, senior, as Mike Gemmer, junior, stares dreamily while listening to the sad tale.

◀ Billy Slyby and Bobby Hutner, seniors, experience a tender loving moment during "An Evening With..."

A Dynamic Evening

The day of "the show" arrives. You can't get much sleep the night before. There is just too much excitement. The day drags on endlessly. All your time is spent either watching the clock or doing anything to keep your mind off of "the show." You wait for thirty, when you can gather all of your costumes together and go to school.

The time has arrived. The auditorium is filling with parents and friends. You nervously wait backstage, arranging and rearranging your clothes so they're just right.

You're standing in the wings of the stage. The lights dim. The music begins. The theme is from Fame.

Your turn. The spotlight is on you. "The show" begins.

"The show" you asks? An Evening With, by Mr. Robert Kelly and his speech team.

The 1982 performance of An Evening With was a hard one to top because of the outstanding speech team it contained and the dynamic performance it gave.

The practices for the show began in November during speech classes and ended the day before the show.

"The week before performance night is the hardest," commented a cast member. "Practices started after school, and continued until late in the evening." Each one with his own lines to memorize was pushing to give it his best when the curtain opened.

Despite the long, grueling hours of practice, and the contemplating of its worth, at times, the loud, clear sound of a standing ovation and the laughter throughout the show, should be a reminder to the members of the cast and to Kelly that the audience was more than happy to have spent an evening with them.

▼ Heather Krandell, and "Roberta" Toy, seniors, sing sincerely to the crowd how wonderful it is to be sisters.

Tomorrow, tomorrow, the sun will come tomorrow ... sings the cast. Back Row: Atkins, Hutner, Krandell, Cavender,

Manning, Belbutoski, Blanks, Beets, Kris Bohnstedt, Johnson, Slyby, Clark, Wildermuth, Westropp, Toy, Morriss, Miller, McKee. Front

Row: Fiedler, Tuesca, Fogel, Sewell, Arnold, Strom, Hackleman, Nunez, Kathy Bohnstedt, Johnson, Pietzak, Hegge, and Gemmer.

Activities

◀ Ann Anderson and Leah Hackleman, seniors, sit intently in a club meeting. South Side offers Archers many varied clubs.

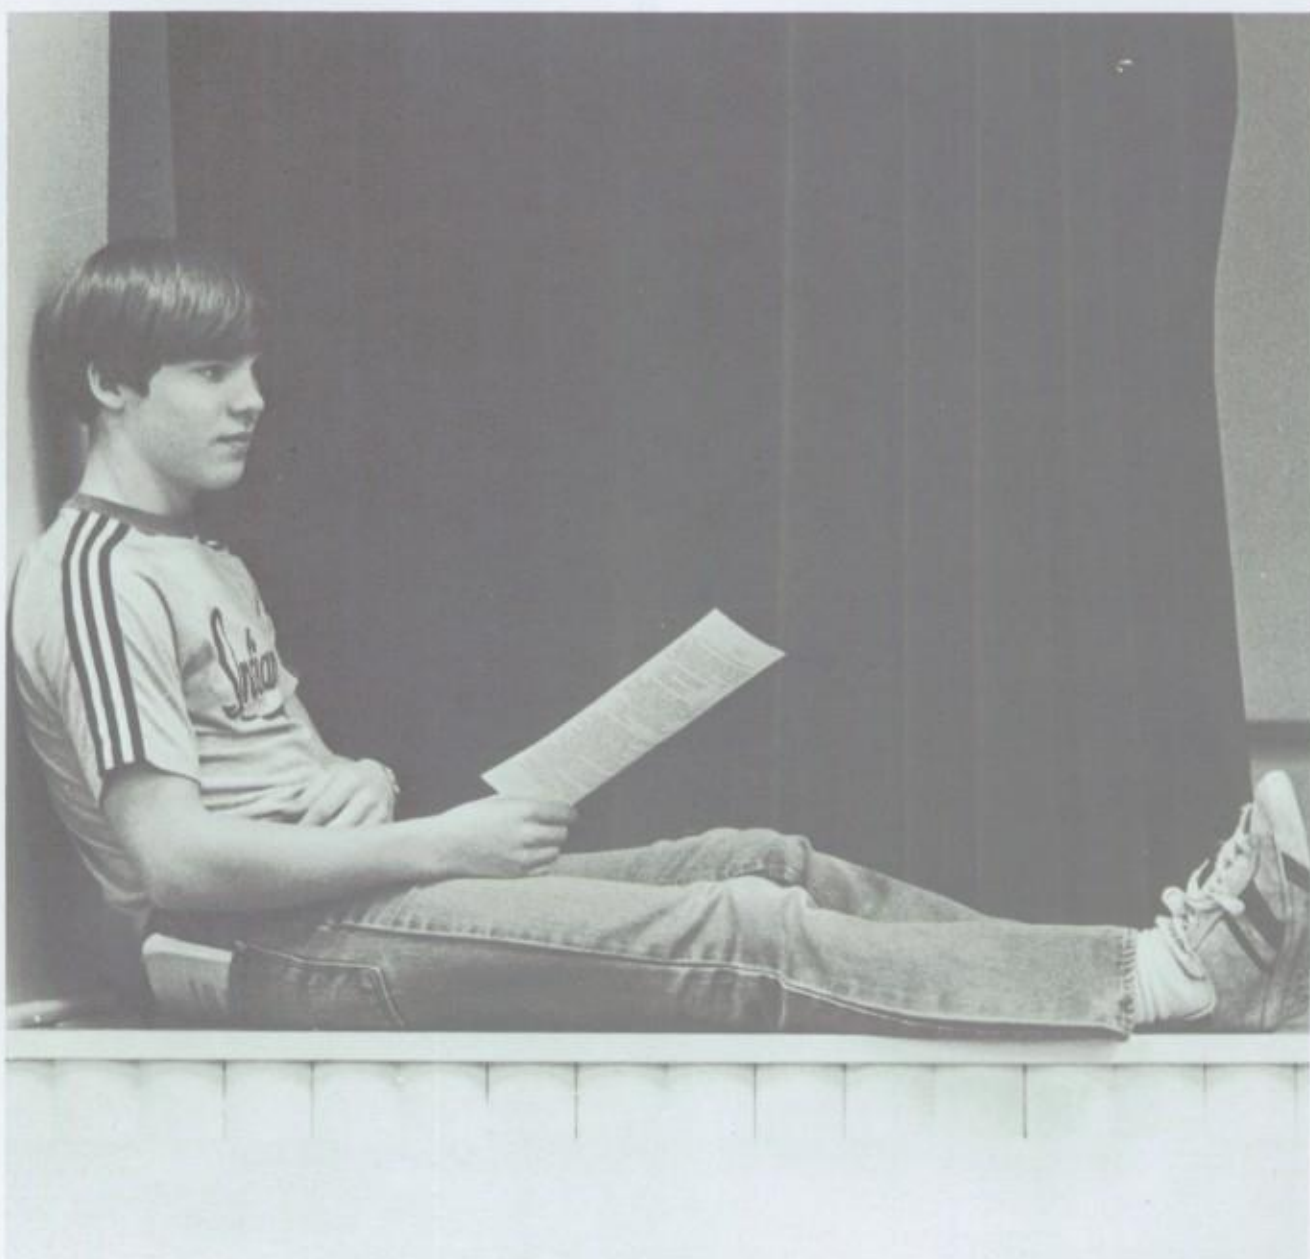

▼ John Colvin, senior, acting as student council president, leads the large council to a busy, successful year.

President of the Afro-American Club, Bonita Anderson, senior, guides the club through many projects that the group sponsors.

Mike Gemmer, senior, a student council officer, spends much of his year attending various club meetings that he is a member of.

Neal Harper, and David Landon, juniors, two of the many active student council members that attend weekly meetings.

Knowledge Gained In Afro Club

▲ Caught in the midst of a word, Mrs. Davis, Afro-American Club sponsor, speaks with one of the club's many members.

Who invented the clock?
The traffic light?
Who performed the first open-heart surgery?

The answers to these questions are, respectively, Benjamin Banneker, James Irwin, and Phale Hale, who were all black men.

The purpose of the Afro-American Club is to teach black culture and awareness in the school and to help others who are less fortunate in the community.

Some of the money-making activities for the 1982-1983 school year are skating parties, sales of various types, dances, and the annual South Side Talent Revue.

The sponsor of the Afro-American Club is Mrs. Barbara Davis, who is doing a wonderful job of bringing the club back up to its potential since the departure of the club's previous sponsor, Miss Ella Jones.

The officers of the 1982-1983 year are as follows: Bonita Johnson, president; Fred Pennington, vice-president; Veda Morris, secretary; Brigitte Marbury, corresponding secretary; and Toni King, treasurer.

Check Your Mate

The Chess Club returned to South after several students expressed their interest in the formation of a group that would bring people together to learn more about the game. The group met every Thursday under the direction of the club's sponsor, Mr. Richard Bussard, to play chess and to learn strategy in advanced competition.

Some of the group's major plans for the year included going to other schools for chess meets and an all-school tournament later on in the year. Many of these activities were planned by the members of the club. Elected at the beginning of the year, the officers also helped to plan and organize activities. The club chose Davis Sowards, senior, as president and Ernest Stalnaker, sophomore, as secretary.

◀ Checkmate? Alan Watrous, senior, contemplates the best move to make in an attempt to trap his opponent, in a chess game.

Arrow Helps Prepare

The Arrow Club, sponsored by Mrs. Patricia Irving, is one of South Side's more unique clubs. Membership in the club is open to all boys and girls with departmental permission.

The club plans social activities for the members and carries out a service project for the community. The Arrow Club, in addition to selling cheese and sausage, sold M&M's this year.

The Arrow Club provides an opportunity for students to do supplementary work in survival skills. The club teaches students to type, use office machines, manage money, give job interviews, and balance checking accounts. These vital skills prepare the student for success in today's competitive business world.

► Raymond Mosby, senior, gathers his notes as he prepares to pass to his next business class.

▼ Theresa Marker, sophomore, concentrates on keeping her eyes on the script as she speedily types during a timed writing period.

AFS

▼ Lisa North, Patrick Holtzer, and Heather Duemling, seniors, "exchange" a friendly kiss from one AFS member to another.

American Field Service, South Side's largest organization, sponsors exchange students to visit foreign countries and to the United States from other countries. Over the past summer two of South Side's students, Lisa North and Heather Duemling, seniors, visited Costa Rica and South Africa, respectively.

Patrick Holzer, senior, was sponsored to come to South Side from Switzerland. He has met many of South Side's students and has been participating in various classes.

The club members together must raise the money to sponsor these exchange students. Many different fund-raising projects are put on by AFS throughout the year. These include M&M sales, a dance, chicken waffles, and the International Dinner. Besides fund-raising, the members are involved in activities such as potluck picnics and a bus trip to Chicago.

▼ A group of Campus Life members gathers to share thoughts during a discussion on relationships.

► Campus Life director, Larry Lance offers his solution to the problem presented by Debbie Bennett, junior, and Becky Dougherty, sophomore.

"Chubby bunnies . . . chubby bunnies." Sound simple?

Try saying it with 13 marshmallows in your mouth. What club is this?

CAMPUS LIFE.

Every Monday evening at 7:15 Campus Life gets together at a member's home for discussions. Games are played, songs are sung, stories are told, and feelings are expressed.

Once a month an Insight meeting takes place. Members dig deeper into the areas of family, friends, sex, true love, and God. The sharing that is involved is a real uplifting of the spirit. Everyone is accepted, and everyone strives towards understanding life's problems and solving them. Together the members manage to work things out.

Getting away from it all is another thing Campus Life people enjoy doing. There is an all-night rollerthon for those who enjoy wheels and a ski weekend for those who prefer the snow. Florida is probably the most looked-forward-to vacation, as far as Campus Lifers feel.

Campus Life is new friends, someone to talk to, some place to be crazy and be serious. In this world with so little to spare, students enjoy spending time on Monday nights at Campus Life meetings.

Society For History Lovers

One of South Side's more unique organizations was the Historical Society. The club was made up of students from all walks of life with one thing in common, a love of history.

Sponsored by Mrs. Lois Headings, the History Club had something for everyone. Field trips were taken to historical sites in Fort Wayne and other areas. Planned trips this year were to the Winney Homestead, the El Greco Hotel in Toledo, and to museums in Chicago.

Many different and exciting speakers appeared at the meetings and discussed a great variety of subjects, including everything from the Moral Majority to a man who collects outhouses.

In addition to such cultural and historical events, the History Club members have tutored history students and worked for the benefit of the community in many ways.

Spectacular Seniors Display Talents

"Are we gonna do it with his underwear on or off?" ... "Not a lot, but I grew a foot!" ... "I got a new dress!"

Such were the remarks uttered by various actors throughout this year's senior class play, "Where the Lilies Bloom."

The play, presented on November 19 and 20, tells the story of four orphaned children and their struggle to survive through the hard and depressed times of the 1930's. "I chose this particular play not only because I liked the heroic qualities of Mary Call's character, but I also felt that the South Side students could identify with the economic conditions of that time period," commented Mrs. Susan Wygant, director.

The first scene opened as Mary Call Luther (Stephanni Beets) and Romey Luther (Mike Gemmer) were secretly burying their dead father, Roy Luther. From that point on, Mary Call is left to shoulder the responsibilities of her remaining family: Romey, Devola (Jenny Seeger) and Ima Dean (Patti Leamon). Together they try to hide their secret and keep Kiser Pease (Eric Anderson) and Goldie Pease (Eve Lyte) from taking the Luther house and land away from them.

The students actors and stage crew members involved in the play put their lives aside for five weeks in order to prepare themselves for the final performances. "The practices were very time-consuming and boring at times," admitted Patti Leamon, senior, "but I really enjoyed doing it. It was a good experience."

An Anticipated Tradition: Homecoming

To each school, Homecoming means something a little different. To many South students, celebrating Homecoming during basketball rather than in the fall is one of the best differences. A hard-fought game, an anticipated dance, and finally the announcement of the Homecoming court are all expected of Homecoming. Unlike last year, a heavy snowfall didn't delay the dance. Instead, the warm weather kept mittens and boots tucked away.

Students entered the packed gym, and the varsity game began after a reserve team victory over Harding. At half-time, the Homecoming candidates, ranging from freshman to senior, were introduced to the crowd. The band and the majorettes performed, and then the game resumed. Finally, the Archers increased the score to an 11 point lead, winning over the Harding Hawks, 64-55.

Once the dance began, the music of "Entertainment Plus" got dancers up on their feet. "Mickey" and "Cocain" were two of the favorites. Soon the lights came up, and everyone gathered around for the crowning of the King and Queen.

The frosh winners were John Westropp, Gina Nierman, Dan Boylan, and Jane Feddock. Todd Starks, Karen Nichols, Steve Christie, and Faith Worthman were the sophomore court members. Chosen for the junior class were Harold Fischer, Shelly Davis, Ed Starks, and Angie Goodman. The two senior couples were Damian Lebamoff, Kris Kurtz, Jim Christie, and Karen Gemmer. Then finally, Cathey Tyree was crowned Queen with Steve Jackson as King.

When the dance ended, everyone said good-bye and made last minute plans with friends. Grabbing their coats and leaving the building, all were happily surprised to see the first snowfall of the year.

JCL Give Culture

Going strong for 50 years, the Junior Classical League, which was started in 1932, is the longest lasting club at South Side.

The club met twice a month at a member's home. Activities ranged from skits, word games, and classical programs to listening to a guest speaker. The meetings were for Latin students to get together to have fun and learn about the Latin culture.

Excursions to various restaurants and having Roman musical skits, kept members busy. The officers were J. Leal, president; Sheila Skelly, vice president; and Karen Nelson, treasurer; all seniors. Laura McClintock and Robert Klingshirn, secretaries, were juniors.

At the end of the year the club sponsored the annual Roman Banquet. The dinner was open to Latin students willing to wear togas. During the banquet, students participated in skits depicting Roman myths. They also enjoyed eating Roman style and eating Roman style food.

Spanish Club Fun

The Spanish Club is a new club at South Side. The club was set up in the early spring of the 1981-82 school year.

The Spanish Club began through the encouragement of many eager Spanish students and the help of Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, the club's sponsors. The club meets once a month, on the second Thursday of each month.

Among the activities was the trip to Toledo, Ohio, Art Museum to see famous paintings by El Greco, who lived in Spain.

Ancina Tuesca, senior, served as president with Tracy Camp, senior, vice-president.

The Spanish Club has enjoyed many cultural experiences and hopes for another very successful year.

New Club A Success

Parlez-vous Francais? Nous sommes Francais. We are the French Club.

Organized for the first time, the French Club is foreseen by its members to be a huge success.

The club, sponsored by Miss. Johnson, meets once a month under the direction of Dan Bromley, junior, president, and Heather Duemling, senior, vice-president.

At the gatherings the 40 members enjoy speakers and filmstrips related to France and its customs.

From the very first meeting when Rick Holtzer, our exchange student, discussed his experiences with French, the club knew it had started off right and would delve deeply into the cultural aspects of France that are not touched upon in the French class.

The Hi-Y Club, led by its senior officers, had a total membership of almost thirty junior and senior members. The club's officers were as follows: Rob Harber, president; Joe Billingsley, vice-president; John Didier, treasurer; Brad Howard, secretary; Rich Deister, sergeant-at-arms; and Scott Hall, chaplain.

Sponsored by Mr. Robert Weber, the Hi-Y Club took on several service projects during the year. The club raked leaves, sponsored the Bloodmobile once again in South, and worked at Acres National Preserve. The club also sold hats for the annual Queen of Hearts Dance.

The purpose of Hi-Y is "to create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community the standards of Christian character." Weber said the club also believed in "clean speech, clean sportsmanship, clean scholarship, and clean character."

Philo Sponsors Many Activities

Girls playing a real game of football? Senior and junior girls participating in Philo, a service club, can have the opportunity to play in the annual Powder Puff football game. This game is a competition of sophomores and seniors against freshmen and juniors.

Mrs. Alice Kinne was the new Philo sponsor. The president was Lisa Harter; Pam Hite, vice-president; Margy Nold, secretary; and Cathy Powell, treasurer. All were seniors.

During the school year, other activities included the Irish Tea, hall decorating, caroling, and a dinner at The Wharf.

The Irish Tea was a tea for members and sophomores interested in being in Philo the following year.

Philo has been a tradition at Southside for many years. Starting as a very small club, Philo has grown into a large organization in which many girls have enjoyed participating.

Tutors Share Time, Skills With Others

Twenty-five South Side students, ranging from freshmen to seniors, took time off from their busy schedules to tutor young children at various area elementary schools, as well as the Lau students here at South Side.

The Tutors, sponsored by Mr. Dan Boylan, English teacher, taught just about any subject. All teaching took place during after-school hours.

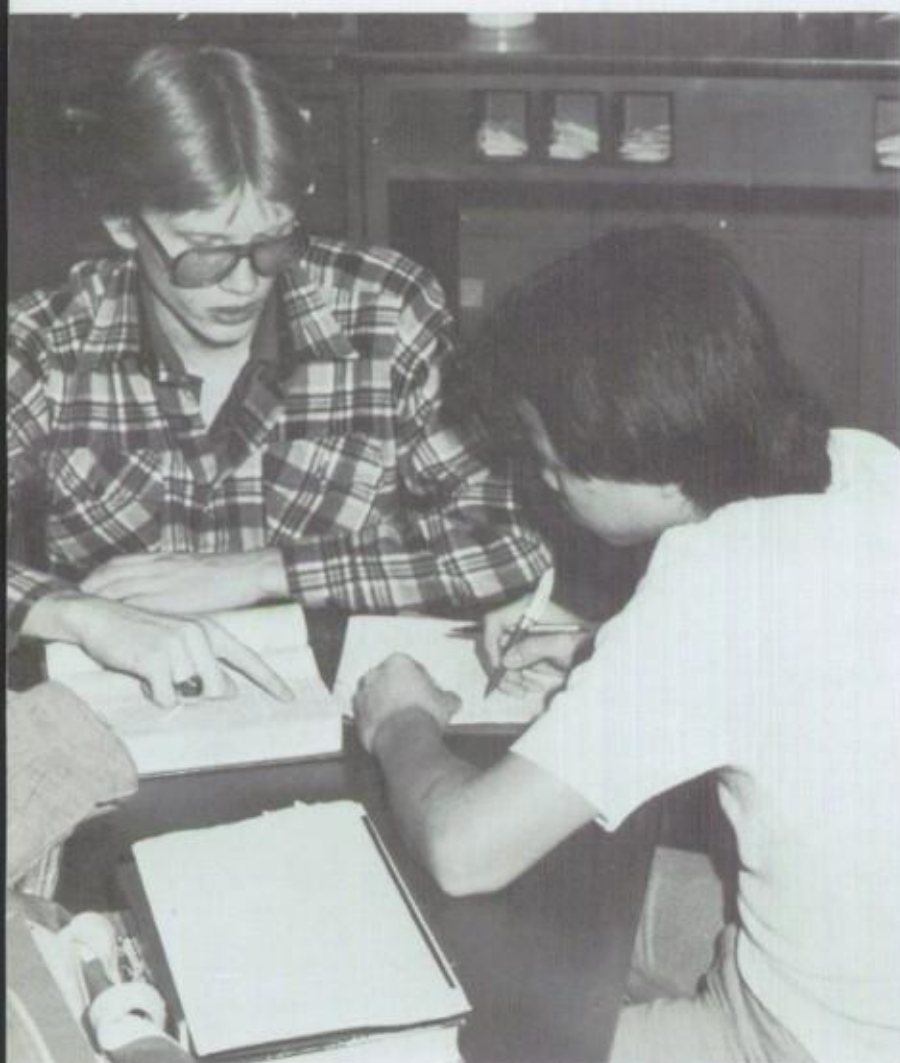

The job of a tutor is by no means easy. In fact, it can be very demanding. However, all involved agree the rewards are just as real as the difficulties. Sheila Skelly, senior, describes the feeling experience when a child grasps a new skill.

"It's a feeling of accomplishment to watch a child grow through his work."

Boylan believes the tutoring program is a learning experience for the Archer tutors, as well as for the children, as it provides them with help for later life, such as being parents or teachers.

The basic purpose of the club was to lift students' self-esteem, by furthering their knowledge and living experiences.

Art Club Officers Chance To Excel

When art class ends, where can a student find classmates with the same artistic interests? Many South Side students have discovered that the Art Club answers this question.

Though a small club, members claim that getting together with other artists helps them to feel more creative. "Being in Art Club is really fun. It's nice to get together with friends and show off our work," stated Tom Kolkman. "We do a lot of really funny and creative things when we get together."

At the weekly meeting, Mr. Albert Jacquay leads the Archers in the building of primitive instruments, devising new ways to create and work with clay, and to just take the time to relax with friends.

Giving an opportunity to students to express their ability to create with originality, the Art Club is surely a club for gifted students.

Student Council More Active

South Side's 1982-83 Student Council was one of the most active student government bodies in many years. Under the supervision of sponsor Mr. Robert Gernand, the members of Student Council really strove to make improvements throughout the school and to organize numerous social events that were enjoyed by all South Side students.

The officers were John Colvin, president; Mike Gemmer, vice-president; Heather Duemling, treasurer; and Paul Lehman, secretary; all seniors. "Our main goal this year was to get Student Council to work for the student body and not just a select group of people," commented Colvin.

Student Council also acted as a bridge of communication between the student body and the school administration. Brad Fenner, senior, was the chairman of the Administration Communications Committee. "I feel the cooperation put forth by the school administration was extremely beneficial in our efforts of running Student Council. I do not feel the office ever hindered a project of ours during the year," said Fenner.

The first benefit granted by the administration was permission to have one meeting a month during school day. This meeting, open to class representatives and alternates, drew a large turnout each month. "By having meetings during the school day, Student Council was able to accomplish more projects, more effectively and do more than strictly a social club. We had an active group of Archers who wanted to see Student Council achieve all its goals. That was our success," stated Colvin.

War Games Grows

One of the newer clubs at South Side is the War Games Club.

In just its second year of existence as a club at South, the War Games organization boasted a total membership of nearly 15 students.

The first love of the club, decided unanimously by all members, is the ever popular "Dungeons and Dragons Game," known as D and D by these avid fans. They also indulged in such games as "Traveler" and also the most favored by the club, "Man, Myth, and Monsters."

As interesting as the games played by the club are some of the costumes periodically worn by its members to the meetings. Consisting mostly of leather and metal, their outfits resemble those worn by the ancient Vikings. The War Games Club looks as if its strong following should help it prosper and grow in its continued existing years at South Side. Club member Bill Dreifke, junior, commented, "Last year we had a tough start, but this year we've really got the club rolling."

Sciences Expanded

▼ No, these aren't in a witch's brew; they're part of the science club's experiment.

The Science Club began its fourth year at South Side with a small increase in membership. Under the direction of Mrs. Kenlynn Stickler, the club also expanded the variety of experiments worked on after school. The group spent a lot of time preparing, examining, and dissecting organisms. These experiments were an extension and addition to laboratory work not offered in the regular science classes. Though the main interest of the club lay in the field of biological processes rather than chemical processes, the group made new and different tests from last year.

The group also spent much of the year preparing its own slides of bacteria, dissecting a shark, examining, planning, and working with blood typing.

Scott Morris, sophomore, commented on his work over the year. "I've had a lot of fun while learning about science, and I feel that the experience I had in the Science Club is a good preparation for a possible career in that field."

Many Good 'Times'

The Times staff works feverishly week after week throughout the year to uphold its obligation to the students of South Side. South Side's newspaper, The Times, is published weekly for those who subscribe.

Mondays and Fridays were hectic days for the Times staff as the staff members hurriedly tried to finish the paper in time for their weekly deadlines.

Stories were written and rewritten in order to obtain the perfection needed for publication.

John Gevers, senior, and Laura Feidler, senior, were editors-in-chief for the first and second semesters, respectively. Their responsibilities included headlining and copyreading stories and seeing that articles were ready to send to the printer each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Other first-semester editorships included Ann Belbutoski, features, Leah Hackleman, sports, and Andy Hufford, news.

Together this staff shared the often frustrating job of creating a paper each week. New ideas for stories and editorials had to be created and different types of writing techniques used.

Publications adviser, Miss Anne White, fulfilled her goal of teaching the responsibilities of writing, organizing, and publishing the school newspaper. She feels that these responsibilities will help her students in their future endeavors in journalism and elsewhere.

No One 'Totem' It Would Be Easy

It is once again a late Sunday night. This story as well as several others is being vigorously typed and headlined in order to make the deadline. Laughter, sounds of anguish, and the rhythm of the typewriters can be heard throughout the room. Last-minute captions, copy, and headlines are being formed in the minds of the 1983 Totem staff.

Writing and rewriting, the staff becomes frustrated at times, but it all looks forward to the finished product. The Totem staff consisted of writers, photographers, and editors, with the editor-in-chief being Karen Gemmer, senior, and the associate editor, Shelly Davis, junior. Both Gemmer and Davis attended journalism institute at Indiana University to gain a better understanding of how to put together a yearbook and to develop some new ideas for the Totem.

When asked to comment on the Totem, Gemmer replied, "... er, um" She had no time to reply. The job of editor-in-chief was more demanding than the other editorships. Many nights were spent sleeplessly in order to meet deadlines, and the drawing of layouts was an endless job. When the staff ran into problems Miss Anne White, the Totem adviser, was sure to offer suggestions and assistance. The Totem is something that South Side students have to remind them of their Archer days. It holds pictures and stories of everything that high school is made of. To the few on the Totem staff, it also holds fond or not-so-fond memories of long hours of work and endless deadlines. These memories along with sore fingers from typing will always remain with them, along with the words, "It's lost! It's lost!"

Rifle Club 'Holds Up' Opponents

Thirty-eight Archers make South Side's Rifle Club. The club meets twice a week, and its members are divided into four groups.

The all-girl team claims members. There was a "first year" freshman, team. Next, a marksman graduated to the advanced team. Finally, the top shooters made up varsity.

All new members are required to partake in a safety course and receive preliminary instruction in marksmanship.

Freshmen use what are known as "first-year" rifles. Not quite as accurate as the varsity rifles, they are built instead to take the abuse administered by an inexperienced shooter.

All members work to become members of the varsity team, which competes in approximately eight competitions. Varsity members compete for the top six spots, which they must qualify for in order to use a varsity team rifle in a match.

The Rifle Club, which placed second in the state in 1983, is open to all classes, and all members are capable of earning letters and medals.

Guides Necessary

For a visitor seeing the school's halls for the first time, trying to find one's way through South Side can be a frustrating experience. Therefore, the organization of Tour Guides is a very important one.

The group, sponsored by Miss Dorothy Walters, was made up of seniors chosen by the administration and willing to give their valuable time to share their knowledge of South's many pathways with those less experienced in "how to get where" at South.

At various occasions during the school year, the Tour Guides aided college representatives during Higher Education Day, dragged befuddled parents to their child's classrooms on Back-to-School Night, and directed numerous students from area schools to their correct rooms at speech meets.

Without Tour Guides to direct strangers through the school, South Side could simply not run like the smooth, efficient machine it is.

RVS Offers Training

The Regional Vocational School is a two-year program, where a student can learn a trade that he or she can use immediately after high school. The Regional Vocational School, where instruction is given, is located in the old Central High School building. During the first year students are trained in chosen vocations, and in the second year they get on-the-job training while fulfilling their graduation requirements at South Side during half of the school day. Horticulture, foods, health, early childhood, automotive, data processing, and graphic communications are just a few of the many and varied vocations which an interested student can learn through RVS.

Changing, Growing Lau

▼ Mrs. Perez assists Phetsamon Xayarath, senior, with a project assigned. Phetsamon's speaking skills have improved since his arrival at South.

This year ended the third year of the Lau program at South Side. "We have had quite a few changes this year, commented Mrs. Janet Perez," head of the Lau program. "Six of our students are working in the RVS program, five of our students will graduate, and we even had two Ethiopian students." Mrs. Souane Mounsamrouath and Mr. Quang Luu also helped the Lau students.

Mai Lam has spent her first year at South Side this year. She is Vietnamese and has been in the United States less than a year. "Things are very different in Viet Nam," she said, "but I like it here a lot better." Having had some basic English in a Thailand camp before coming here, she has been challenged by the new language.

Bounma Vonaphachanh, a notable Soccer Club player for South Side, will graduate this year. He has liked going to South and says that he hasn't had any trouble with his English. Bounma plans to use his experience from RVS to find a job after graduation.

The Lau program has aided 44 students this year. Its efforts to link students with little or no English skills into a daily American lifestyle have provided opportunities for many students.

▼ Come on, muscles! Fred Pennington, junior, displays his strength as fellow classmates cheer him on during strenuous body-building.

Let's Get Physical

Some Archers dread this class, some can take it or leave it, while others look forward to it, as a break from a day of sitting in desks.

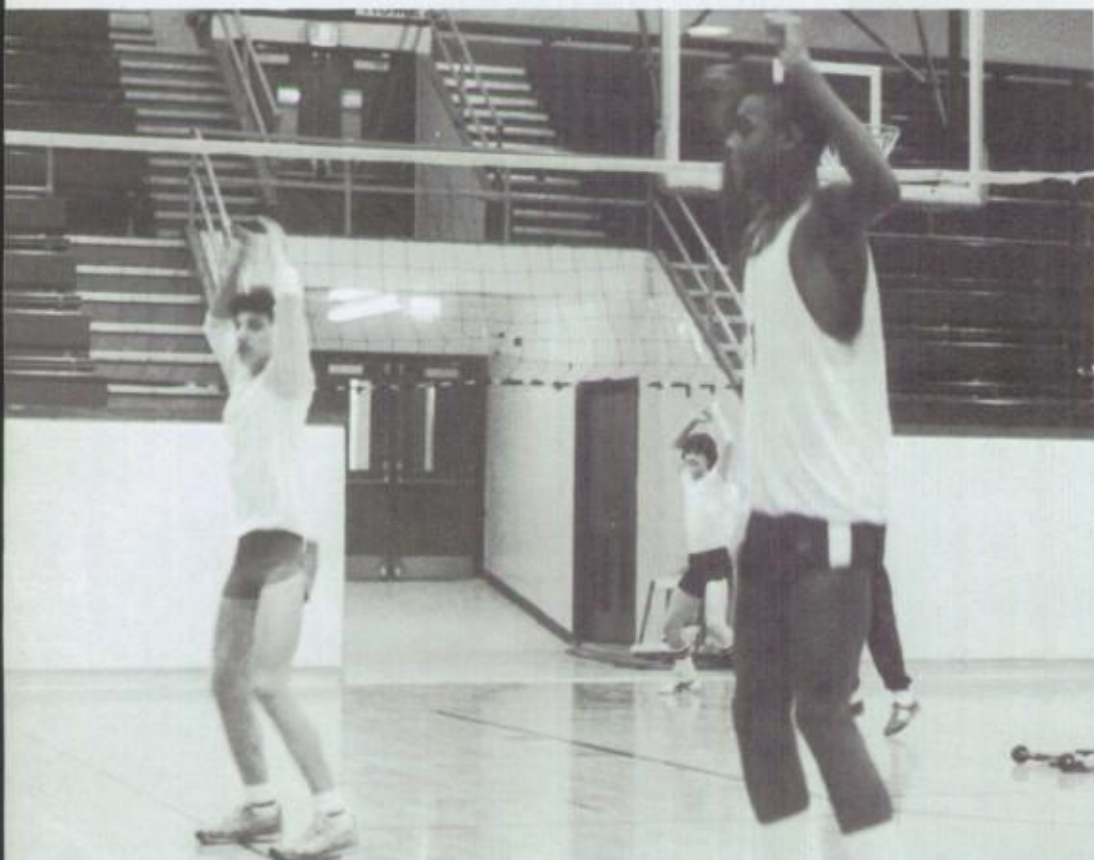

This class, required of all freshmen and sophomore Archers, is gym.

During the required classes, students participate in a variety of sports activities, ranging from basketball and gymnastics to badminton and ping pong. They also take part in a series of tests in all types of sports events.

If a student wishes to do so, he can go on to specialized classes, which concentrate on one area of athletics, such as body-building and gymnastics.

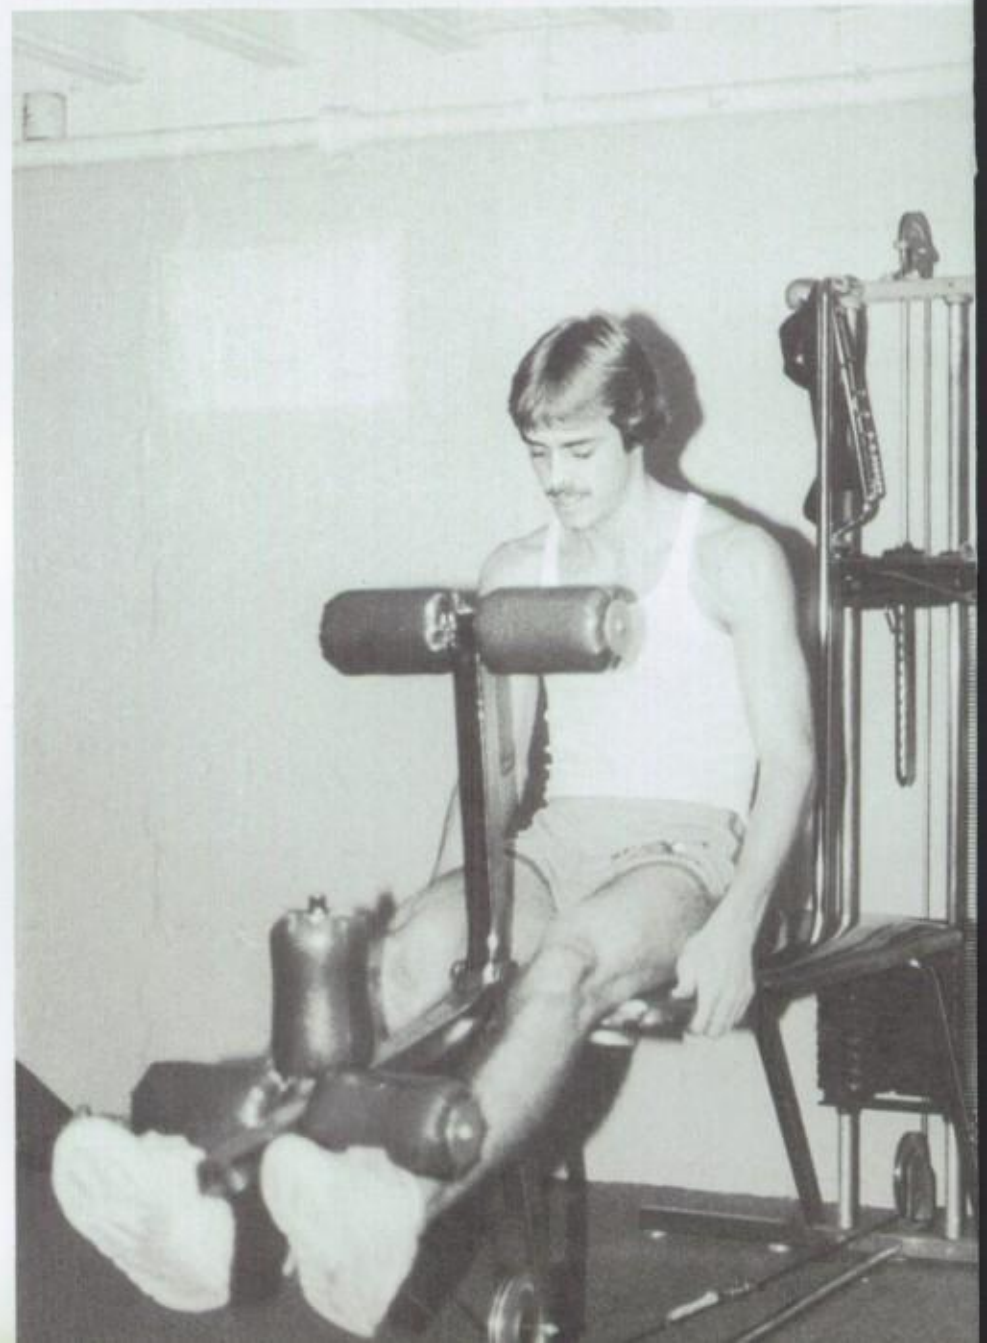

Body-builders are put on a total muscle-strengthening program, which includes strenuous weight lifting as well as staying away from drugs and alcohol.

Gymnastics class gives girls as well as boys, the chance to improve their flexibility and tumbling skills.

▲ Go, you chicken fat, go! Exercising was an essential part of each gym class. Each class began with exercises to tone bodies.

► Jim Christie, senior, tests the strength of his legs during a recent body-building class. He seems happy with the results.

Mr. Glen Stebing, intramurals instructor, advises after school as two boys' teams from challenge one another.

Intramurals Popular

More and more students here at South Side continue to benefit from the daily physical activity in the intramurals program sponsored by Mr. Glen Stebing.

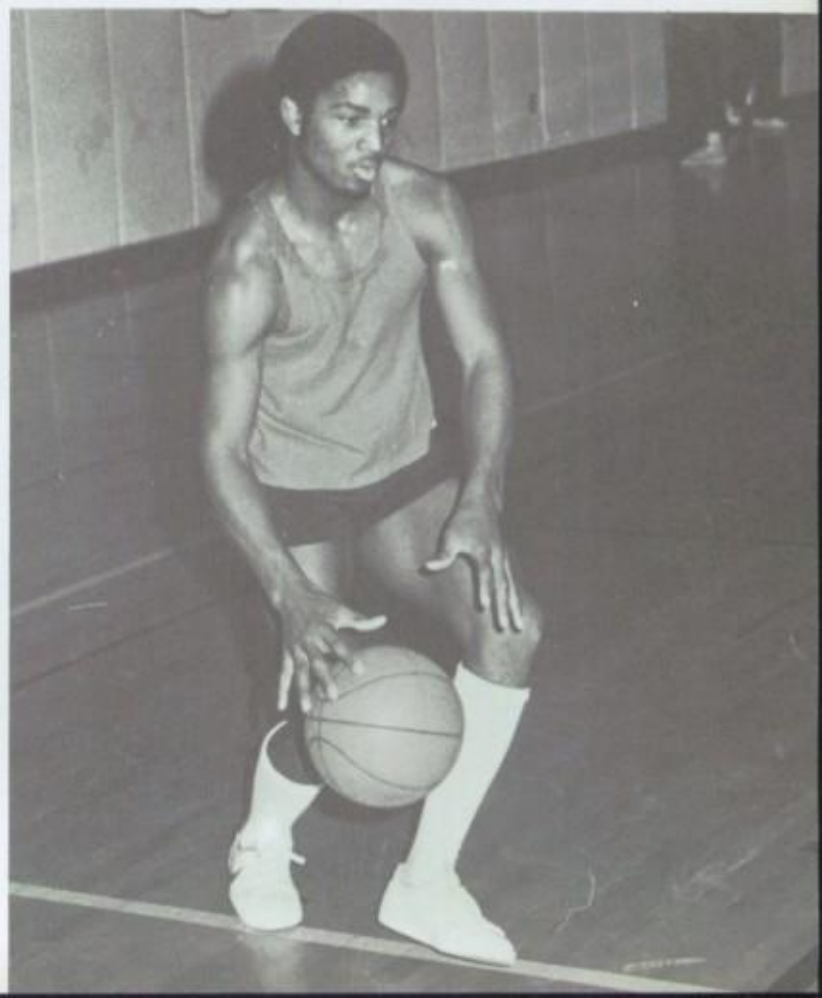

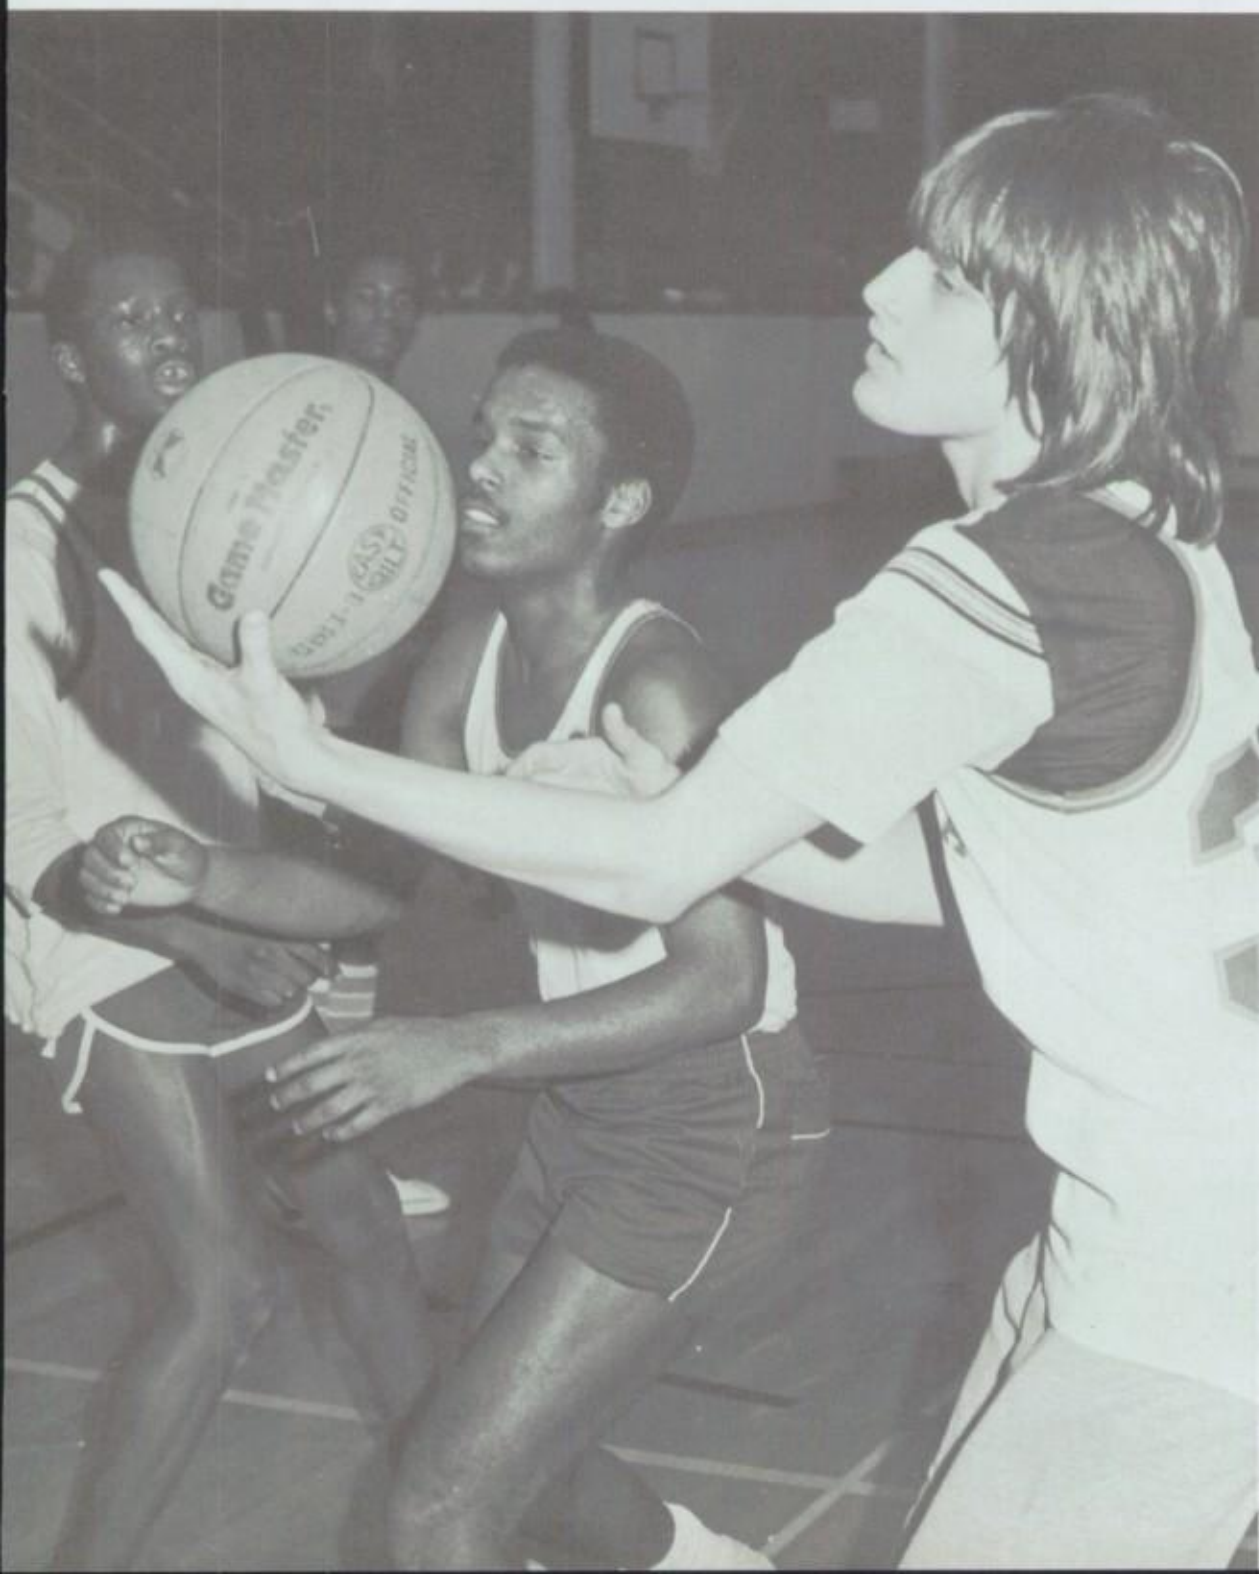

The intramural program gives the students the opportunity to keep physically fit all year around. In the fall, students can play football; in the winter, basketball, handball singles and doubles, racquetball, volleyball, bowling, and ping pong singles and doubles. The spring offers such sports as softball and tennis.

Good times are enjoyed by all who play these sports as a means of developing friendships or enjoying the fine competition offered in the intramurals program at South Side.

Stebling stated, "The intramural program at South Side is very successful. I only wish more people would take advantage of the program and participate in it."

▼ Cynthia Hartsock, senior, works diligently to complete one of her many complicated worksheet-assignments in her C.O.E. class.

C.O.E. On The Job

Cooperative office Education seems to be the way to go for those people interested in the ways of business.

C.O.E. is a class through which a student can receive on-the-job training in a business atmosphere.

The Office Education Association is a club in which the student may go downtown and participate in businesses and work in them for three hours every weekday. A student must also have one hour of a related class at South Side to participate in the club.

As there gets to be an increased emphasis on education and a good background, opportunities such as C.O.E. become more vital to high school students. Students who go through the C.O.E. class learn these skills well and how to apply them. After graduation these young adults will be more qualified than their less-fortunate counterparts; and, when job-hunting they will inevitably find the task much easier.

"It's reassuring to know that I've got the skills and that I'm prepared," commented one C.O.E. student.

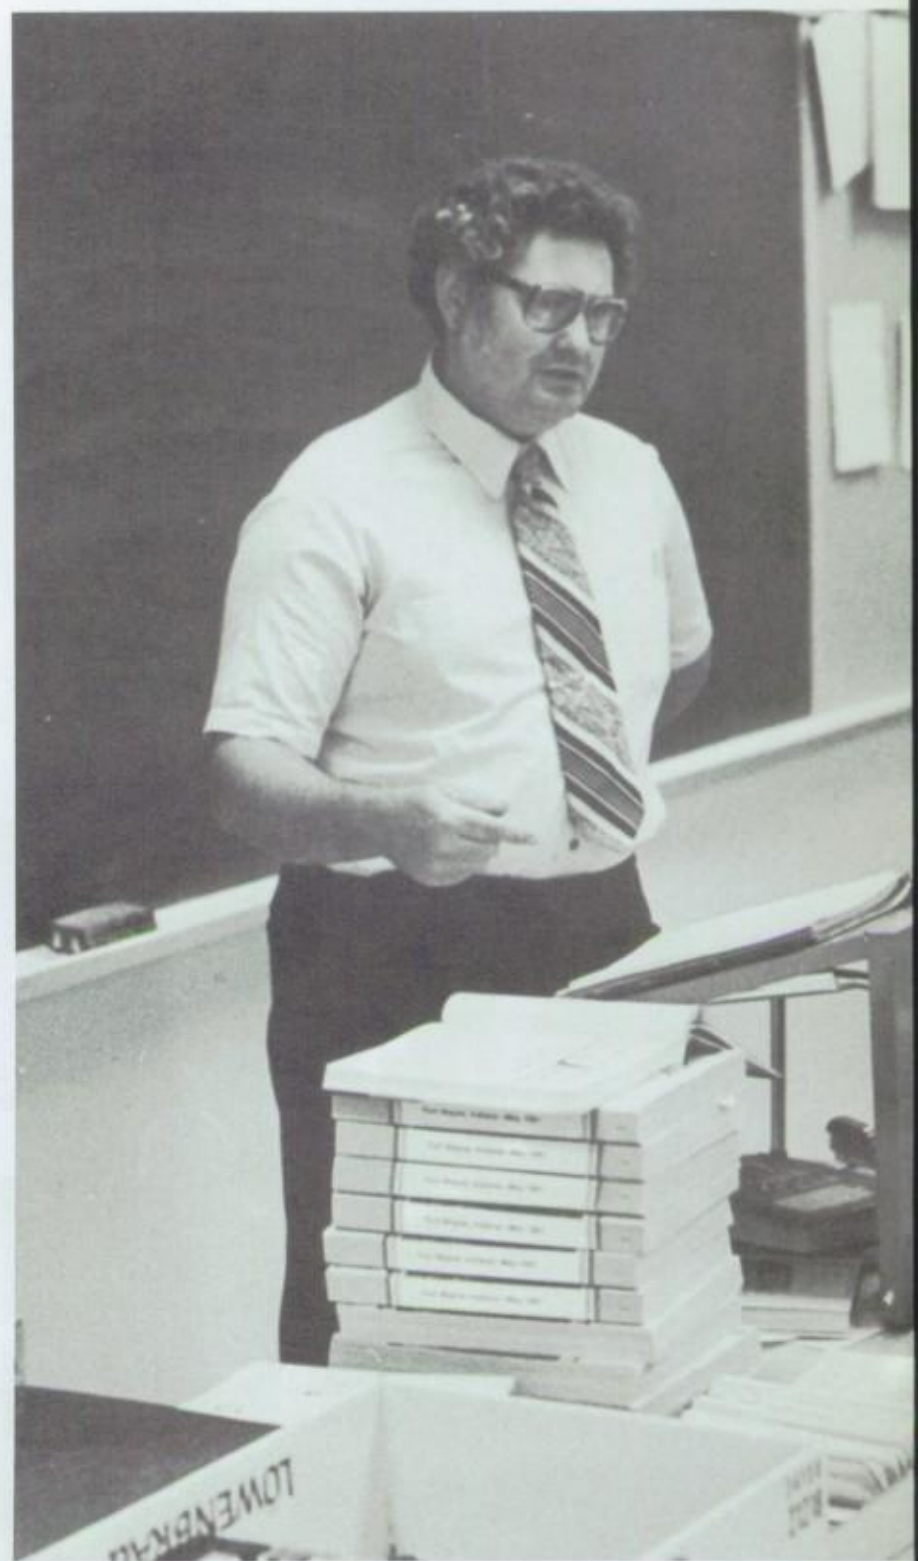

Experience Offered

Those students who are interested in the business world have the opportunity to participate in the marketing and distributive education class at South Side. Once in M.D.E. a student could belong to D.E.C.A., which is the Distributive Education Club of America.

The purpose of M.D.E. is to teach the principles behind the American system of free enterprise, and it emphasizes the economic importance and advantages of competition.

The members of D.E.C.A. are involved in 17 different categories, several of which job interviews, public speaking, and ad layouts. The competitions start at the district level, which includes 13 schools, and proceed to the national level. Last year Eve Lyte, senior, reached the state level competition in Indianapolis.

◀ John Hall, Larry Dauscher, and Eve Lyte, seniors, show great interest in DECA class, where they prepare for future jobs.

◀ Working intently on his studies, Darrin Underwood, senior, strives to beat the clock and free himself of homework that evening.

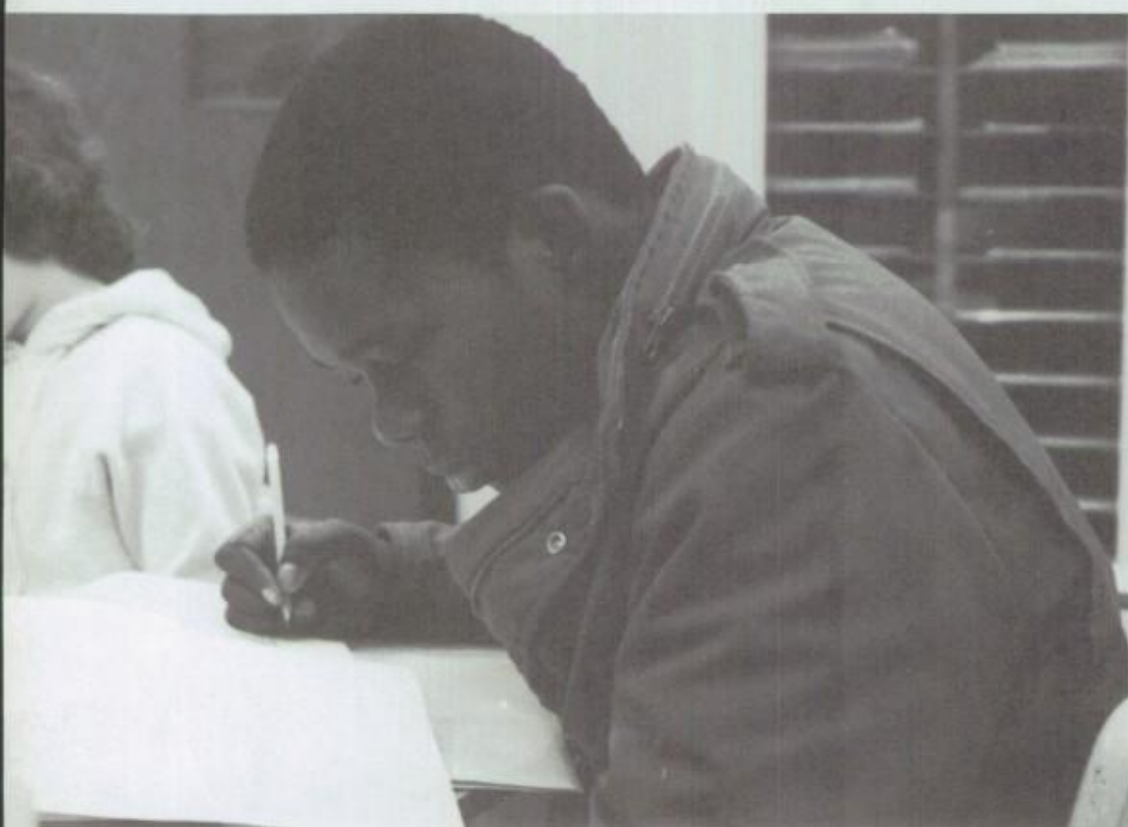

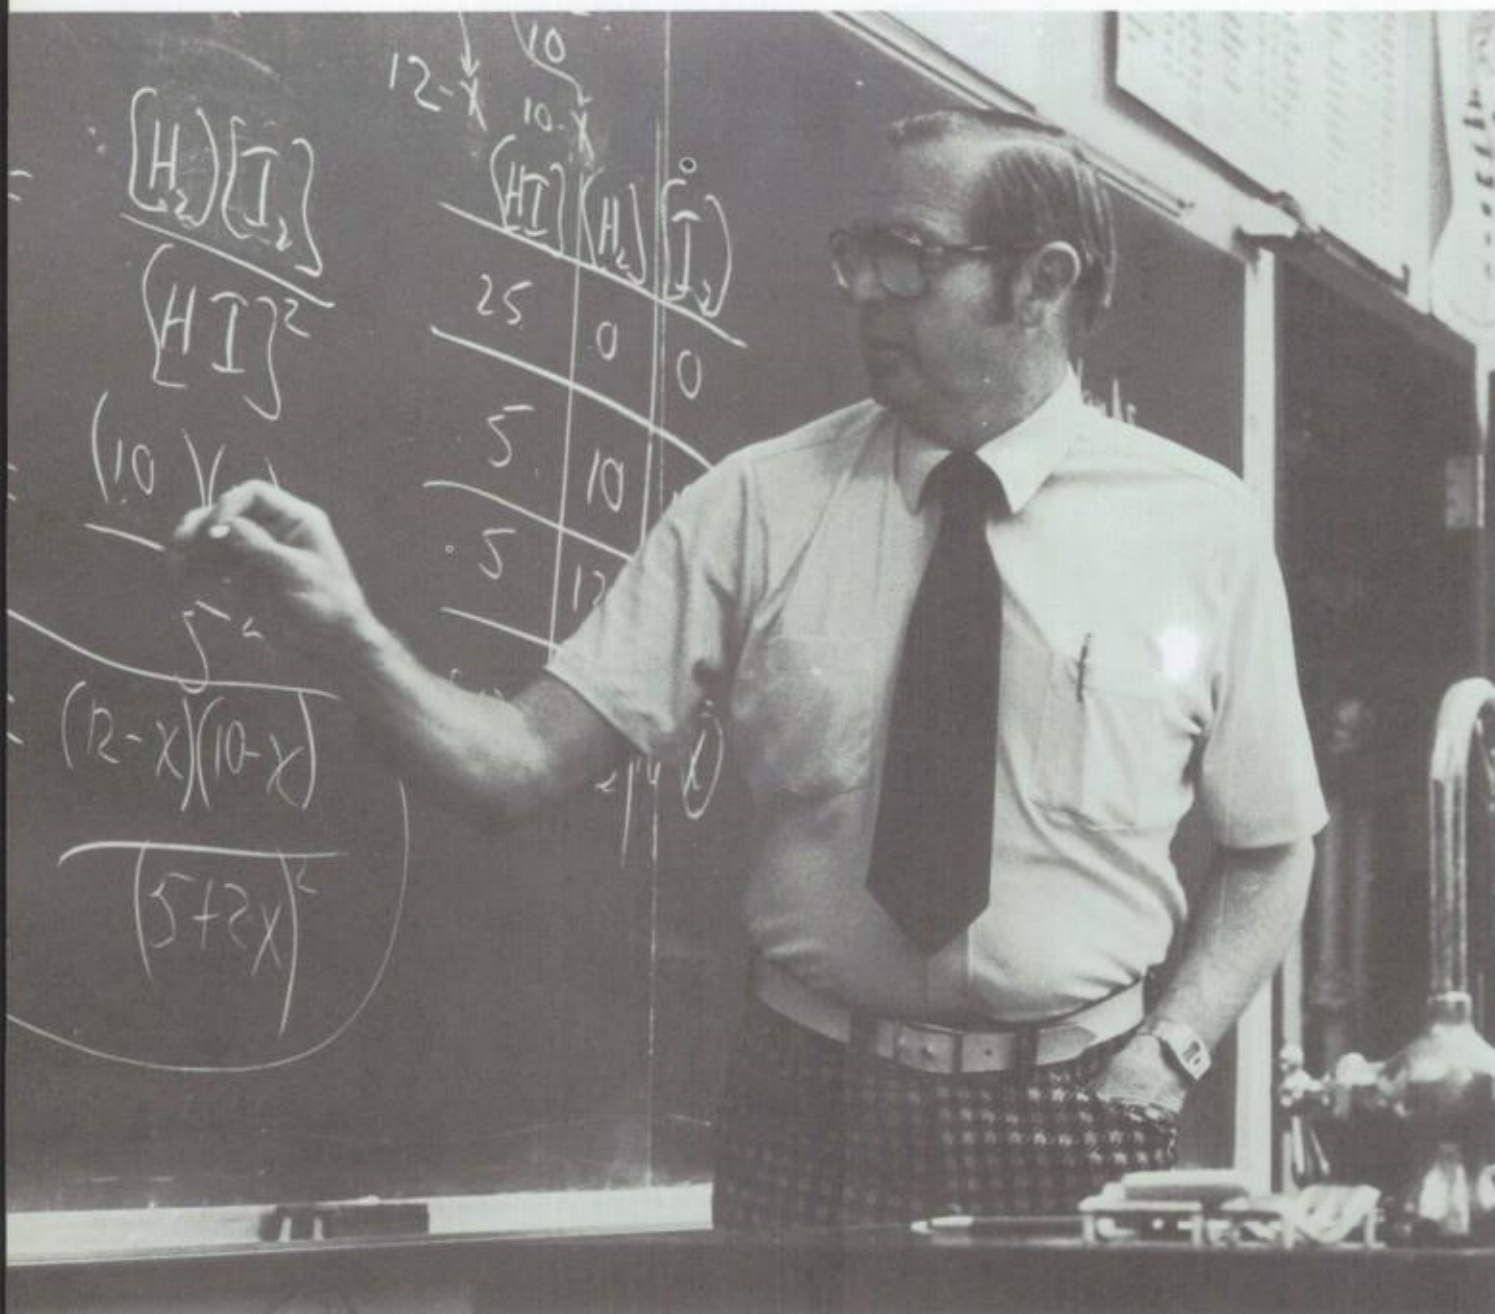

▼ Look confusing? Don't worry! Mr. George Davis, chemist, explains everything in detail to his classes.

Science, Good As Gold

The infamous cation and anion experiments were one of the highlights of the year for Mr. George Davis' Advanced Chemistry class. Monday mornings were spent in the lab trying to figure out exactly what was in the little vials. "Despite the fact that we now have a black thumb, I think the experiments will really help when we get to college," commented Eric Anderson, senior.

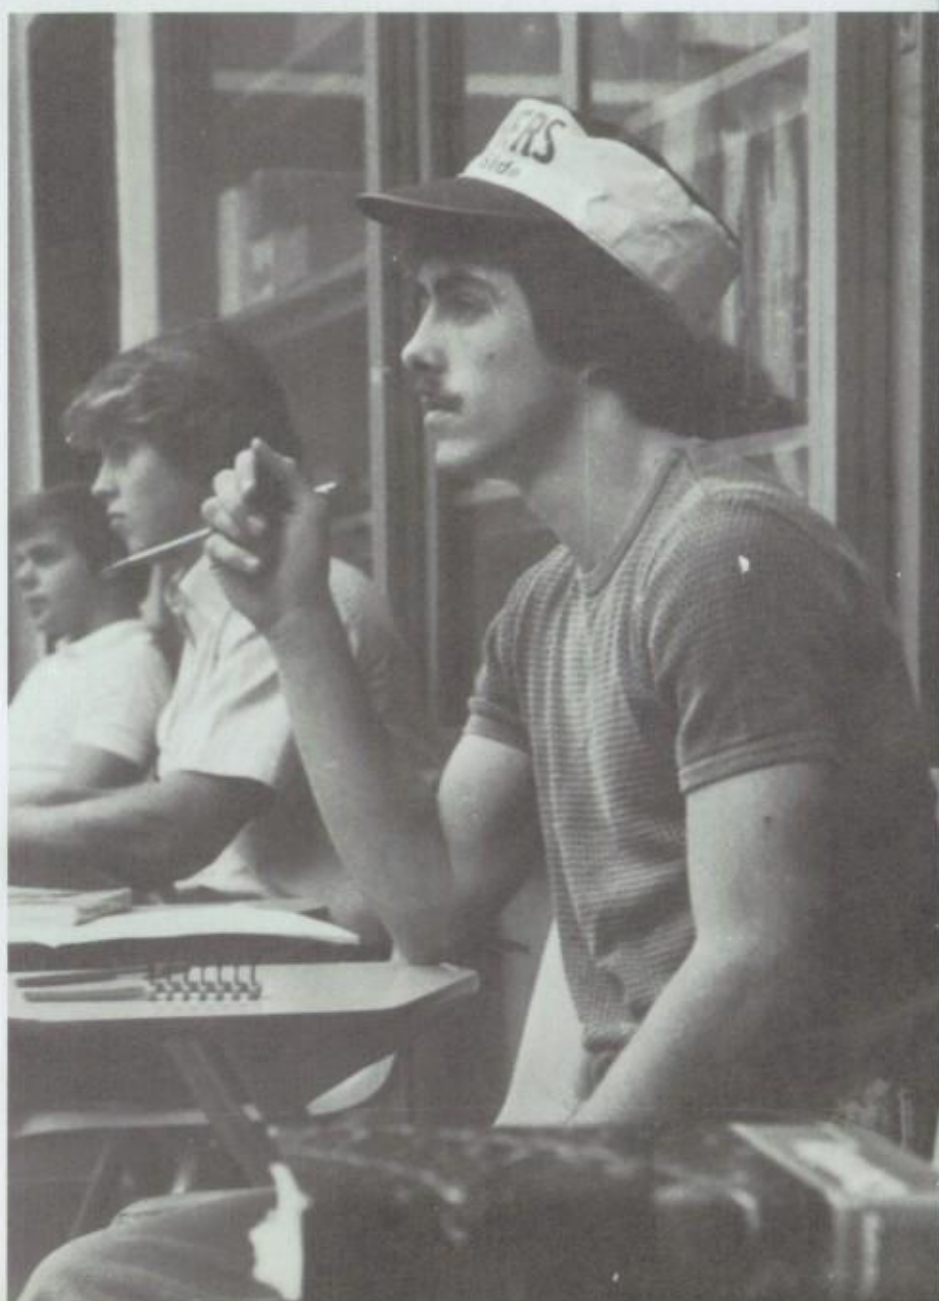

The computer continued to make its presence felt, too. While the advanced classes used programs to test their knowledge of solutions, the beginning classes used the computer to learn about chemical reactions, electron subshell structure, and the mole.

The physics students, taught by Mr. Richard Bussard, had their usual degree of success and failure as they attempted to learn about momentum, electromagnetism, and waves. Tom Roberts, senior, was asked why he took the class. "I like science and feel that I should have a strong background in the sciences."

► "I think I can, I think I can . . ." Jim Christie, senior, keeps a positive attitude while concentrating in Advanced Chemistry.

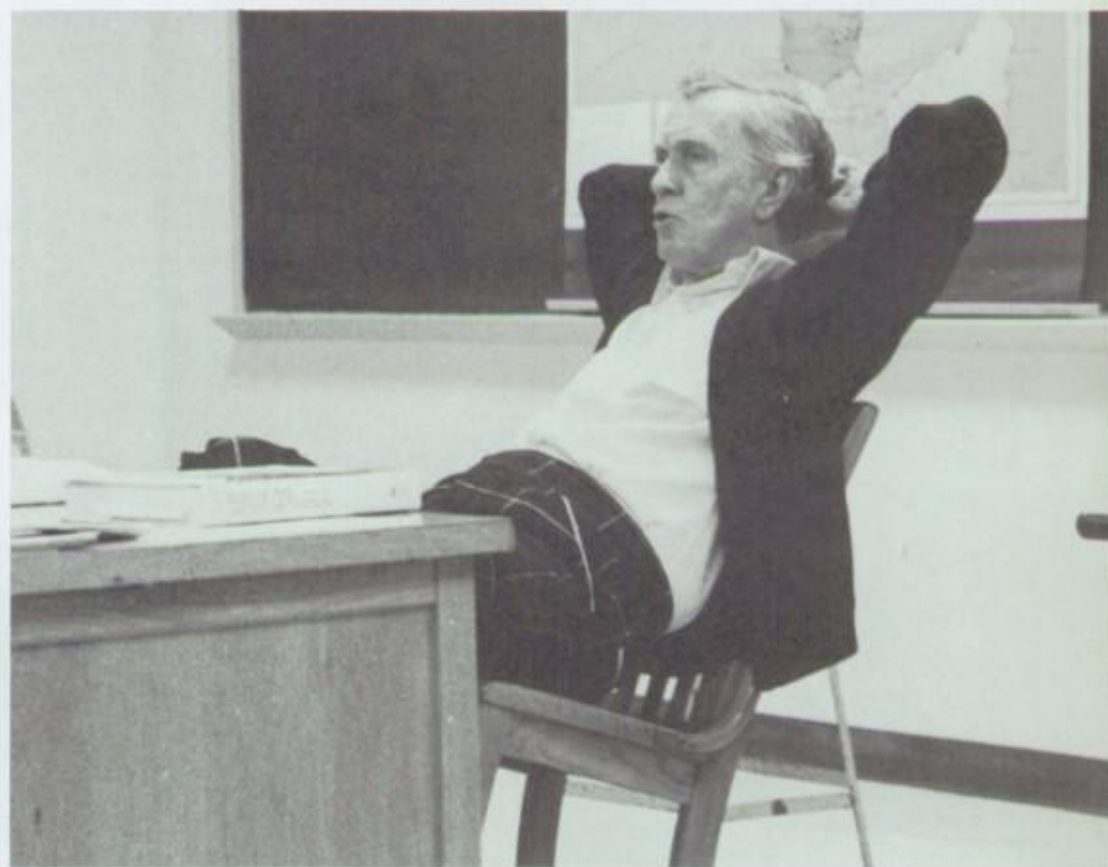

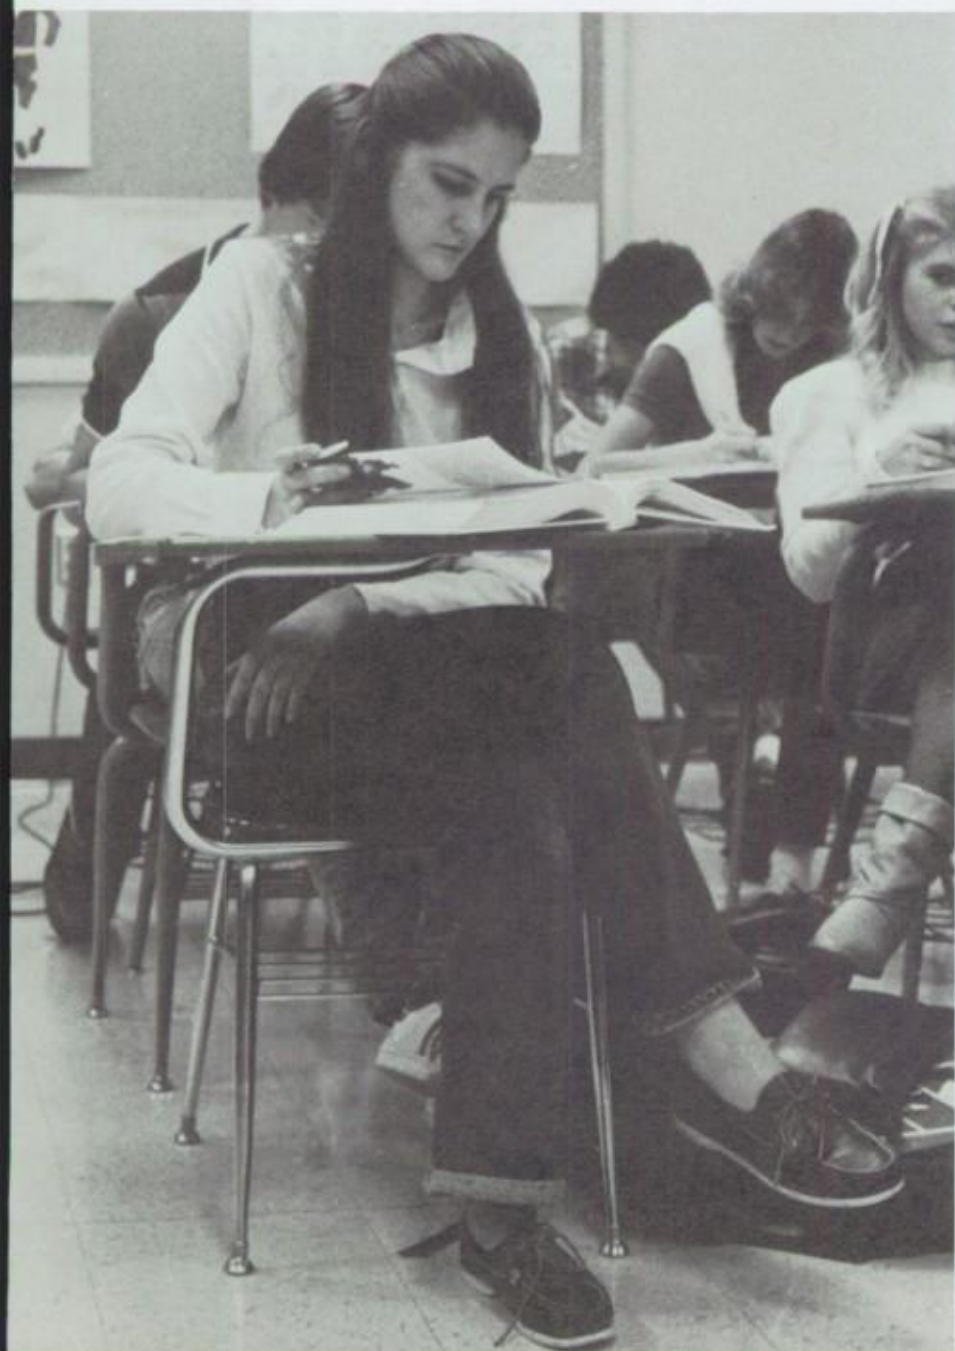

Do The Time Warp

▼ Lori Miller, sophomore, smiles as her mind drifts from history to her plans for the following Friday night.

Students in the Social Studies department had several opportunities to expand their horizons. The department continued to have a wide selection of classes to choose from. Students could take world history, U.S. history, government, economics, psychology, or World Affairs. This selection allowed students to fulfill graduation requirements and enjoy classes at the same time. The newest project of the department was the Investment Club with department head, Mr. William Burrell, as sponsor. The club enabled students in economics to invest in stocks and then share in the profits or losses. When Brad Fenner, senior, was asked if the club was a useful element to the class, he said, "Absolutely, I feel the establishment of this organization was beneficial to the educational purposes we strove to achieve this year. By doing this we, members of the club, gained a hands-on familiarity with the workings of the financial world."

▲ "And that's the way it was", Mr. Thomas Burrell, history teacher, leans back as he reflects upon the past.

◀ Looking through the chapter in preparation for an essay test, Susan Felger, junior, tries to memorize some historical facts.

► Mr. Sage, head of the Math Department, points out how to find the cosine of a right triangle to Beth Pilditch, senior.

▼ Gretchen Rodewald, junior, uses the computer terminal to calculate the number of cubes that can be made from a square foot.

Math Department Educates

Webster defines mathematics as . . . "The science of numbers and sets and their operations, relations, and combinations and of space configurations and their structure, measurement, and transformation." As complicated as that sounds, one would expect a math course to be somewhat baffling. Many find this true but fail to verify it by geometric proof. Many students, however, find math interesting and, yes, sometimes enjoyable.

With the world advancing in technology by leaps and bounds, math is becoming more necessary for the student wanting to succeed in life. Perhaps the strongest area of the Math Department at South Side is the three-year Advanced Math Program including calculus at the senior level. The courses offered by this program allow accelerated students to receive more detailed learning, some at the college level.

The course that grew most in popularity was the computer math class. Computer math offered students a chance to become acquainted with and master the machines that are becoming more and more a part of everyday life.

South's Math Department is instrumental for one who is planning to pursue a college education. Math provides a solid background for all subjects and is looked on as the "subject of the future."

▼ Derek Benson, sophomore, looks intently into his general mathematics book as he studies diligently for an upcoming test.

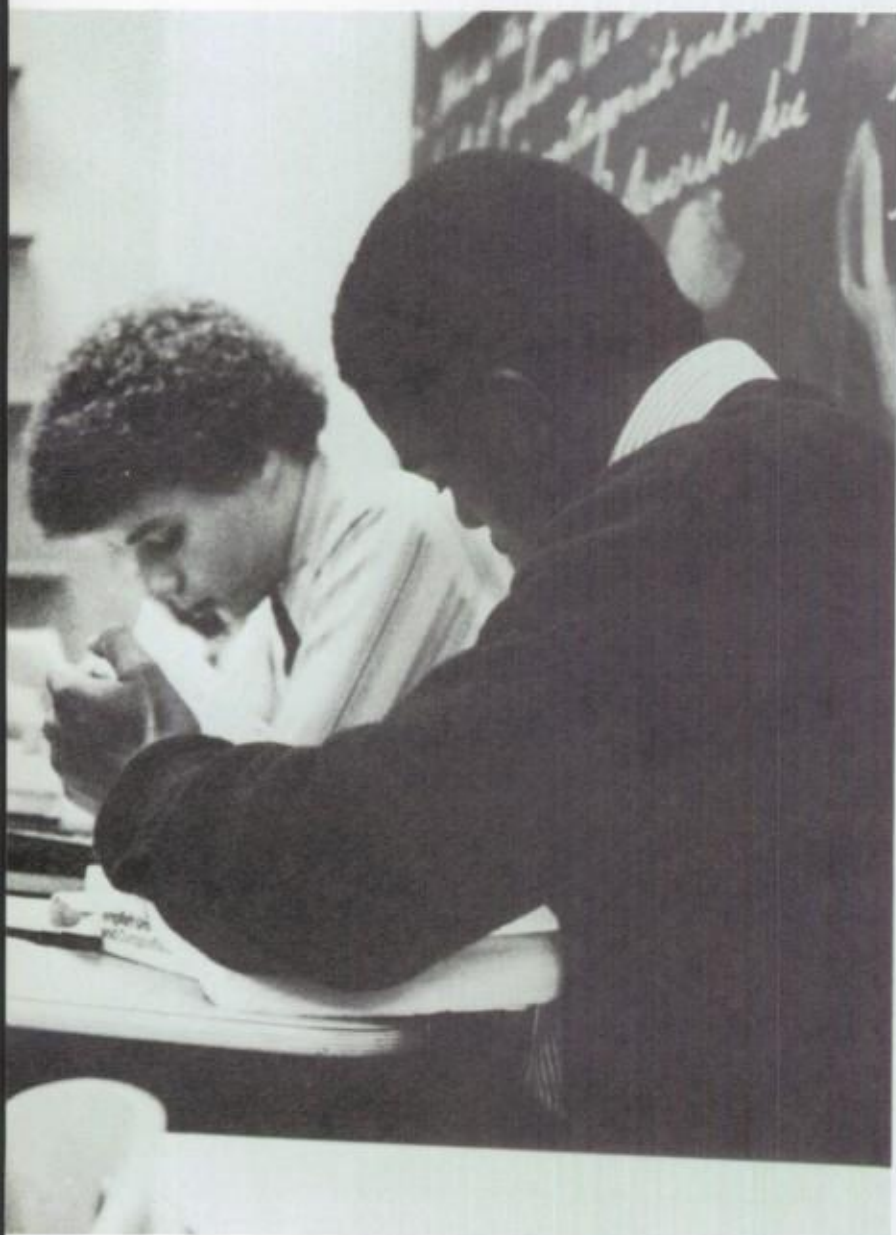

◀ When he's not playing football, Mark Sanders, senior, is busy at work so he is able to keep his grades up.

▲ Heidi Skelton, sophomore, seems to be quite a bit more interested in what's happening than the person behind her.

English Classes

Difficult But Useful

▲ Bruce Bochard and Charles Moore, seniors, are caught cramming for a weekly vocabulary test minutes before the exam.

► Pete Demitsas and Debbie Fedock, seniors, listens intently to the discussion as Keith Goings, senior, thinks about his upcoming composition.

How do I love thee, Hamlet, Macbeth, Julius Caesar, Romeo and Juliet, hour-longs and writing term papers made up the excitement, nervousness, and agony of English Classes.

No matter if one wanted to take English or not, it was required; but when one looks back over the year, English was really more fun than anticipated.

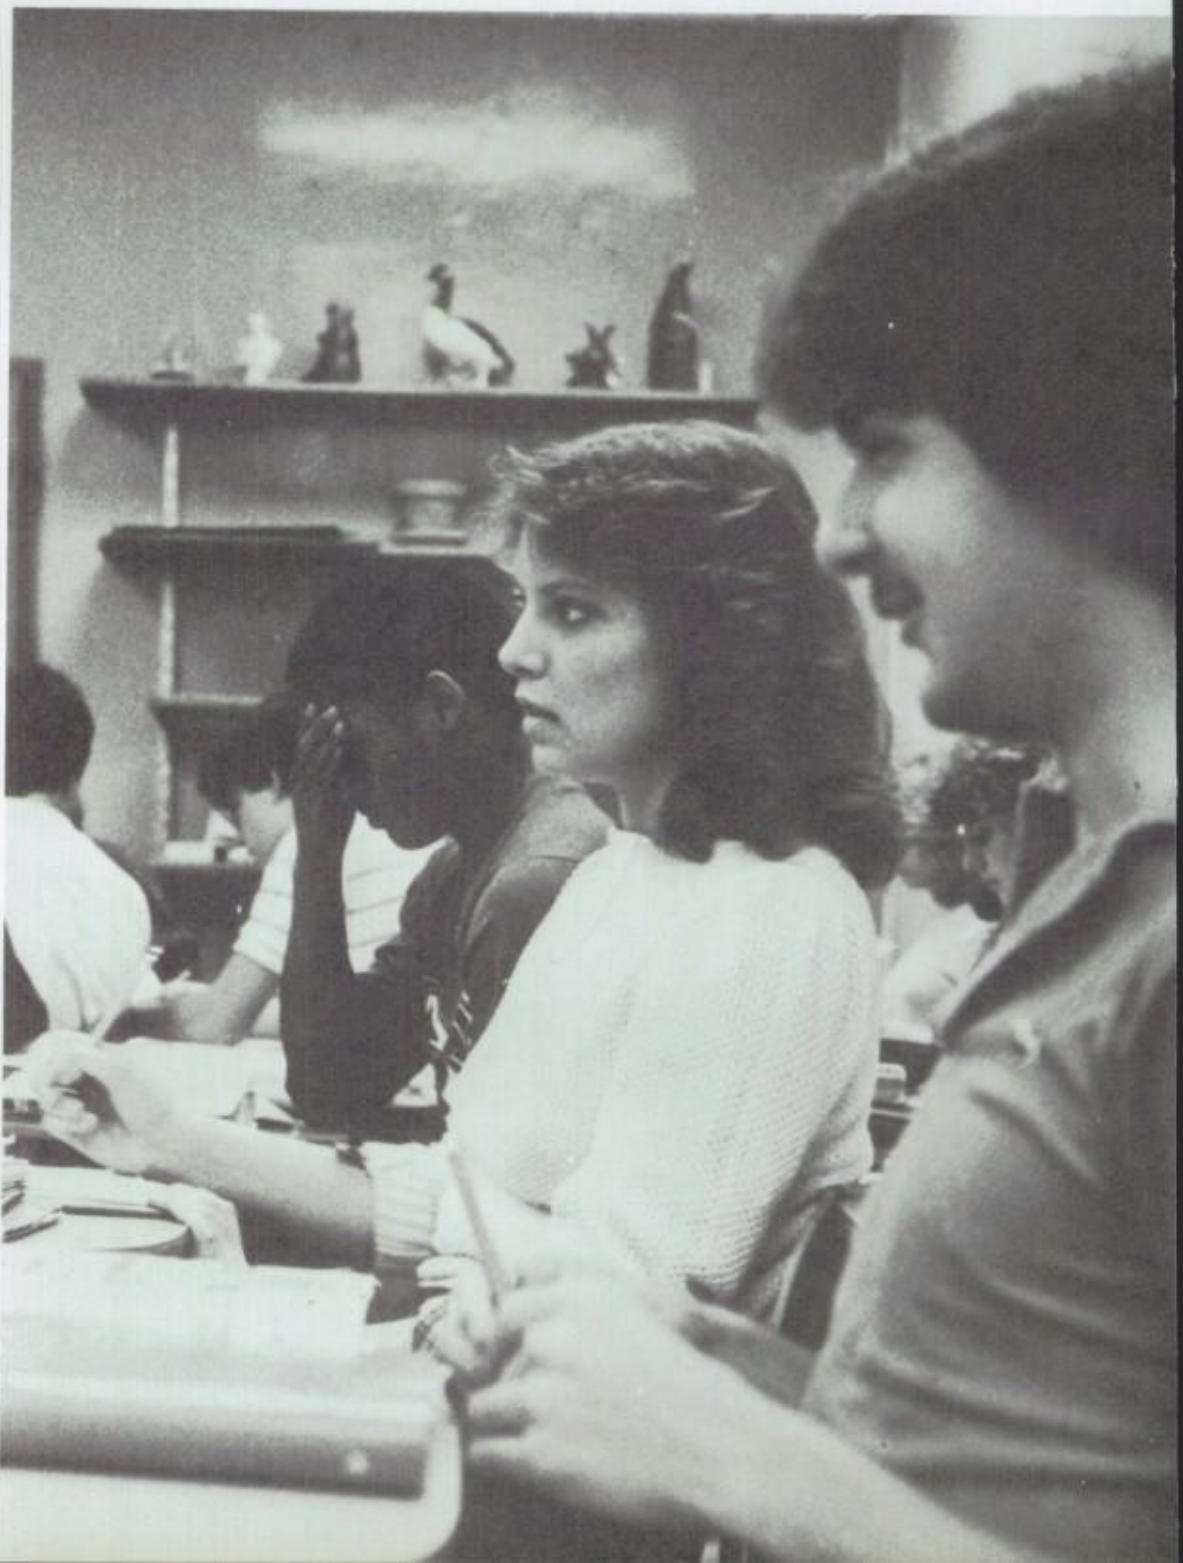

South's English department offers varying levels of learning. From Y lane to honors, one can find the learning level desired.

English is a necessary subject, and every student is encouraged to take four years. Whether one plans to enter college or to begin a career after high school, English is very important. Speaking correctly and using proper grammar are beneficial to future endeavors. Though not always enjoyable, one can gain much from our English Department.

If a student takes four years of English, by his senior year he will have read four of the Shakespeare plays, many classics, written at least 100 themes, compositions, reports and stories, and studied every part of English grammar nearly 10 times.

Sometimes English can be more of a trouble than a pleasure, especially when one stays up until 2:00 a.m. to finish a book report, write a composition, or memorize vocabulary words. Though it may not seem worth it at times like these, when an "A" comes back on a paper, it makes all the hard work seem a little less agonizing and a lot more worthwhile.

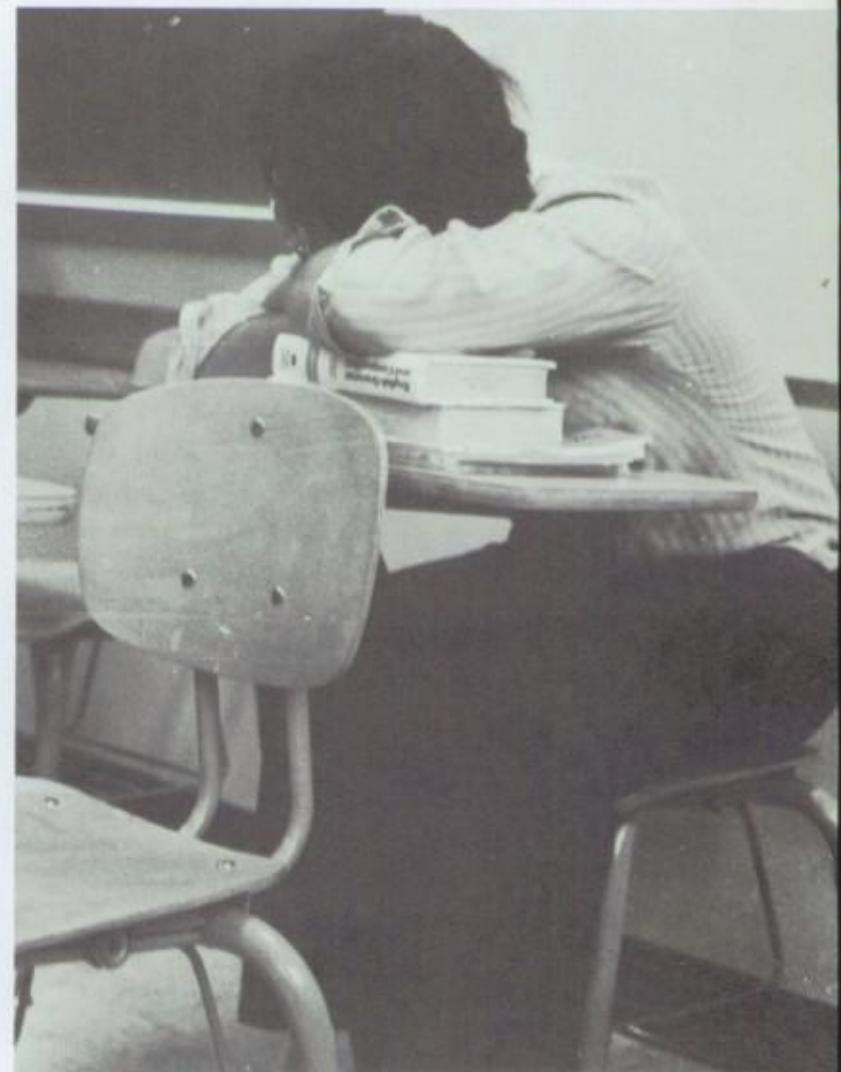

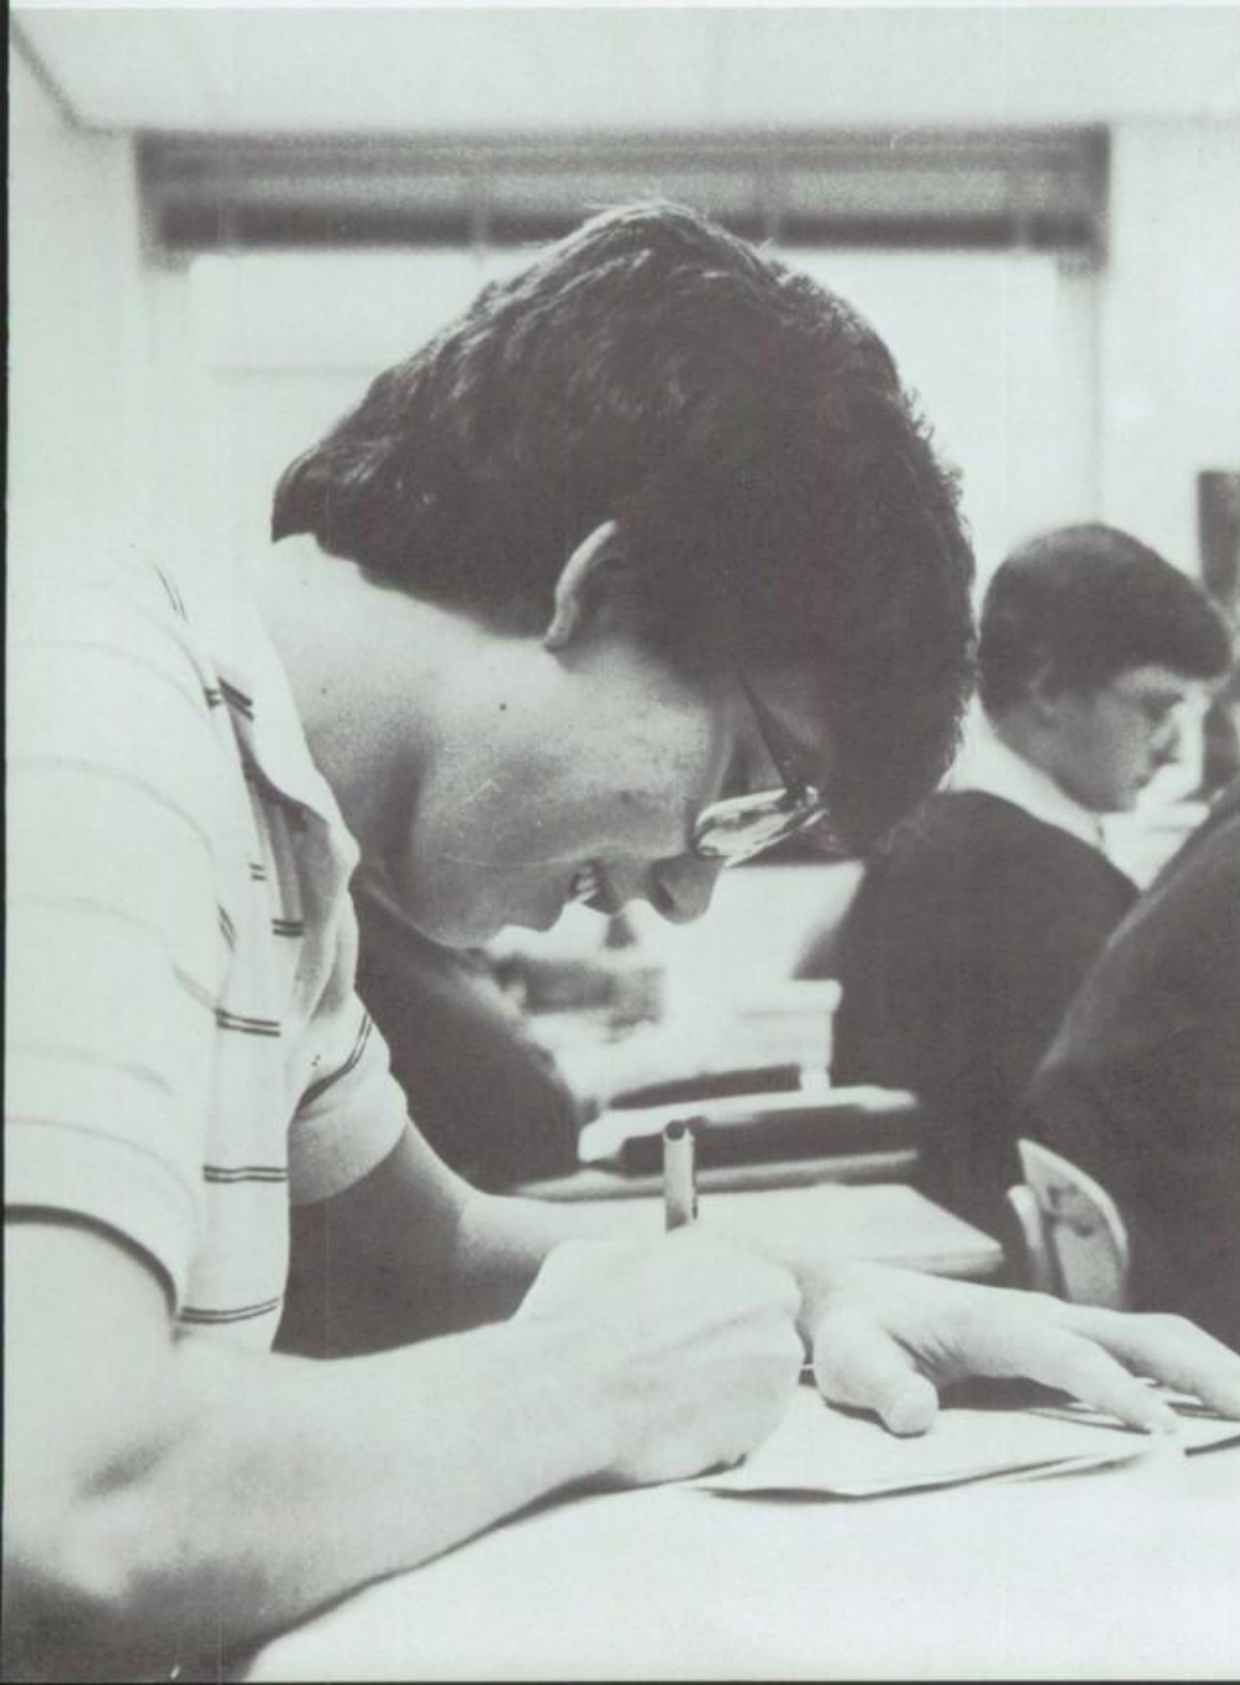

▲ Phil GiaQuinta, senior, requests the help of Mrs. Langdon on a composition assignment during an advanced English class.

◀ Todd Heemsoth, senior, finds humor in his homework assignment as he busily attempts to complete it before the end of class.

▼ James Chin, senior, closes his book and his eyes for a brief nap before venturing into the crowded halls on the way to his next class.

Foreign Languages

"Hola!" "Bonjour!" "Guten tag!" "And salve!" When walking down the foreign language hall of South Side, one can hear any of these four "hellos" coming from the doorways.

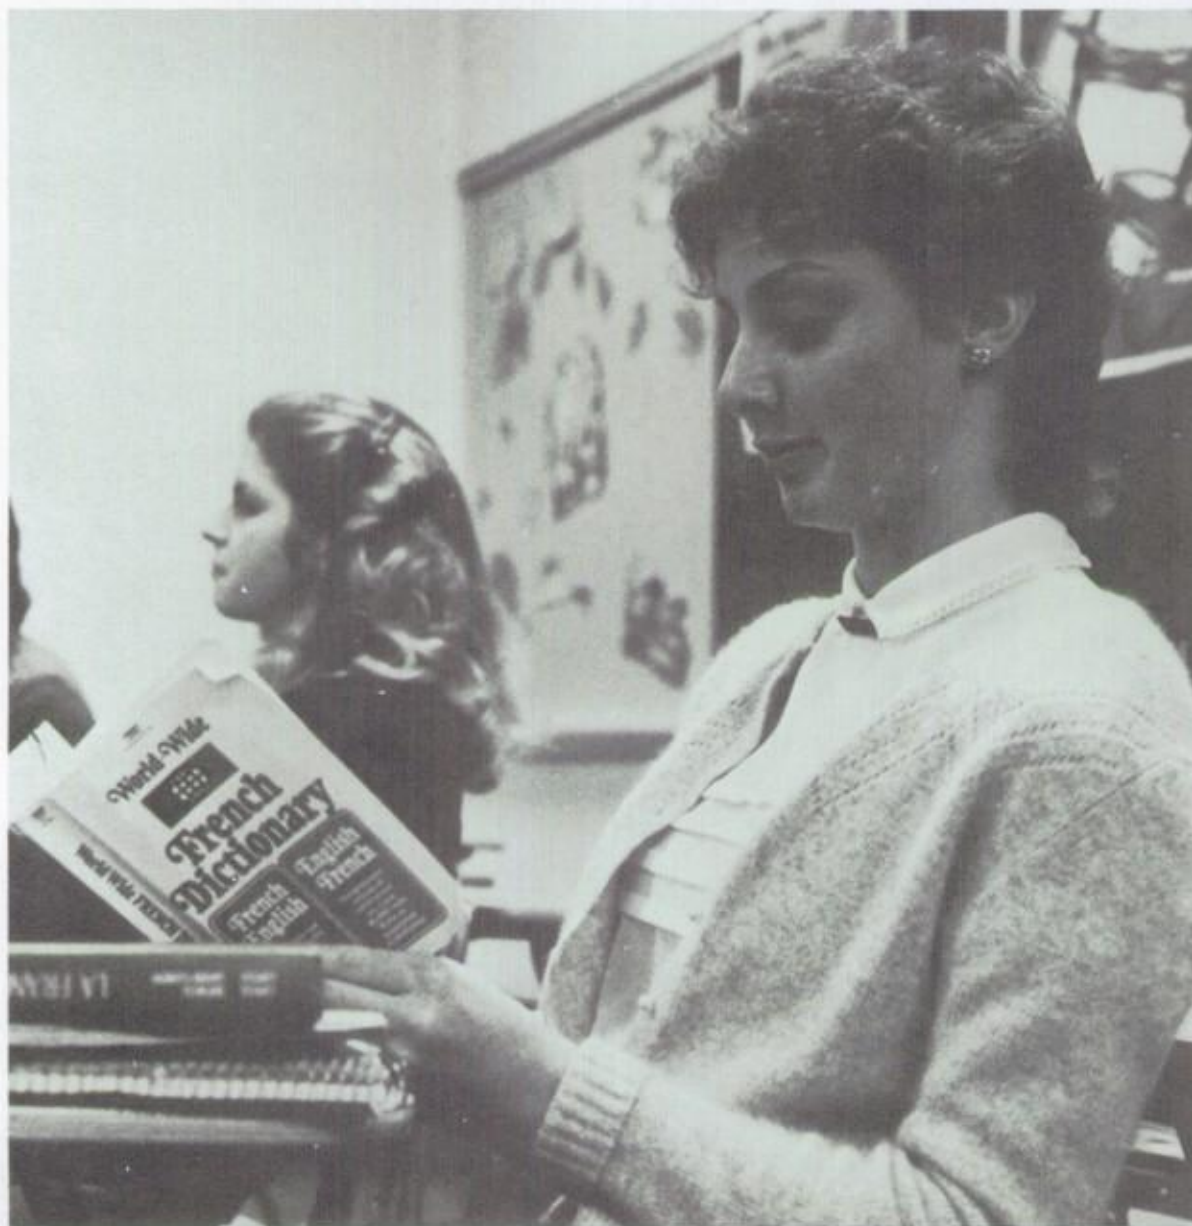

Headed by Miss Lois Holtmeyer, South Side's Foreign Language Departments offers 16 different courses that a student can take during his four years at South. The department offers first through fourth year in all these languages: Latin, German, French, and Spanish. Next year, for those talented enough, fifth year foreign language classes will be offered.

The majority of the foreign languages at South had after-school clubs this year. Meetings took place, officers elected, and fun times had by all. Many times special foods were prepared and "cultural experiences" were shared.

The department stresses the importance of the cultures of the countries where the languages are spoken; and, of course the obvious aspect is the study of the spoken language itself.

Most of all, foreign languages give students the opportunity to be creative. From weekly and daily class discussions to written compositions and translations, students of South Side learned to express themselves in different languages.

▲ Looking up a confusing word, Lisa Nestor, senior, finishes her French assignment before the bell.

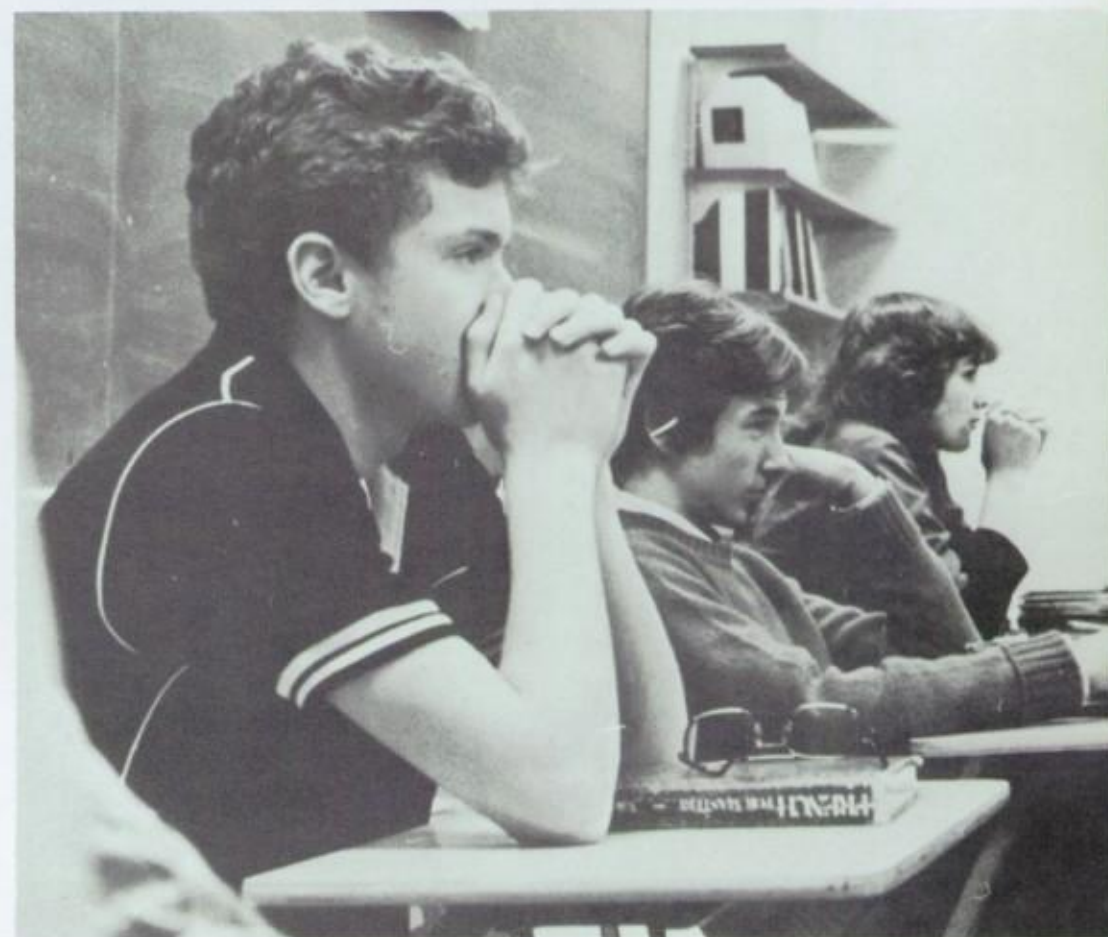

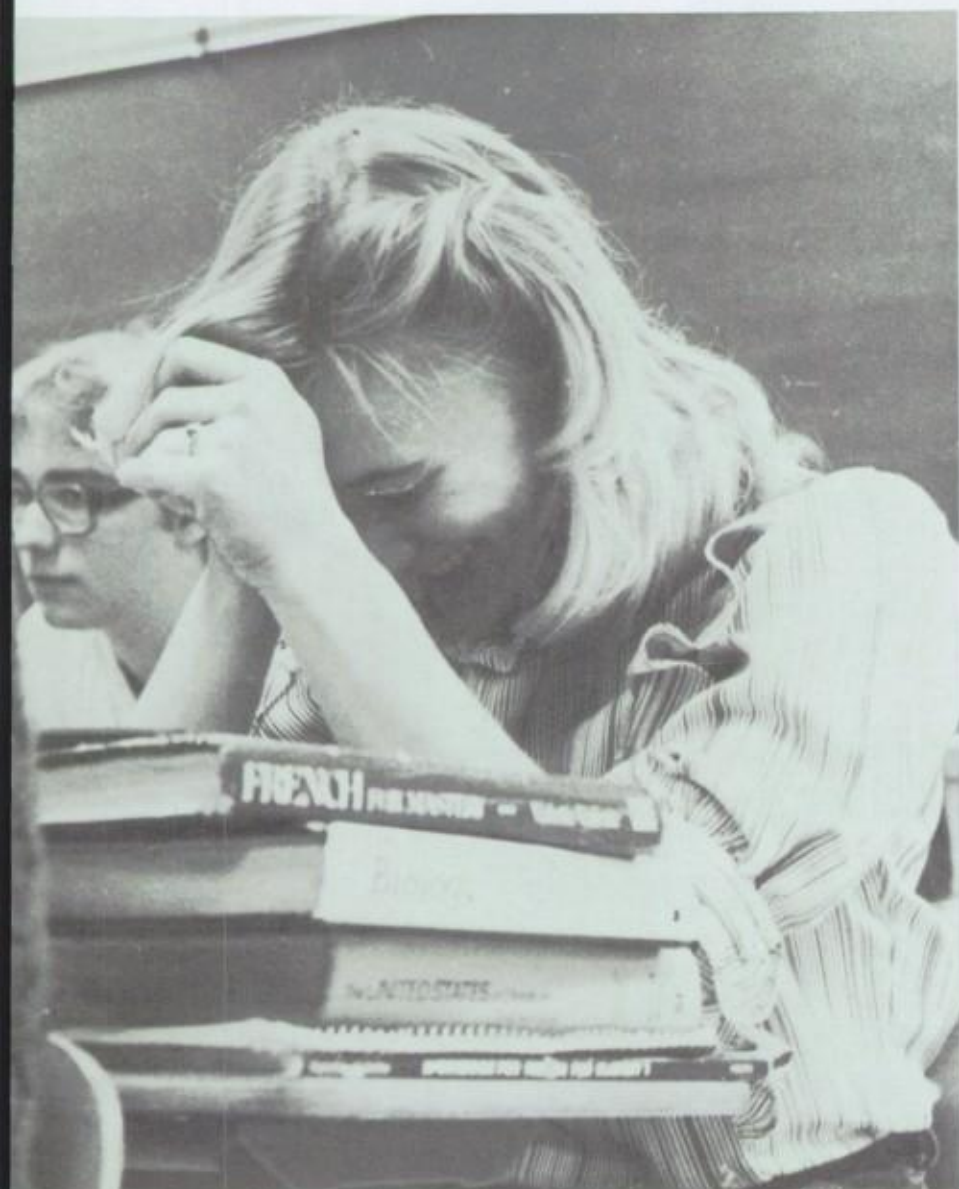

► "Oh, gosh darn it!" says Lork Barker, senior, as she wishes she had studied when she receives her test.

◀ Foreign languages require a lot of hard study and concentraton. Nanette Snavelly, senior, shows this in her attitude towards class.

▼ Look, Mom, no head! Heather Duemling, senior, tries to escape the confusing grammar of another language.

▲ Scott Colley, sophomore, waits for the French video to begin. French students view a video once a week.

Skills Useful

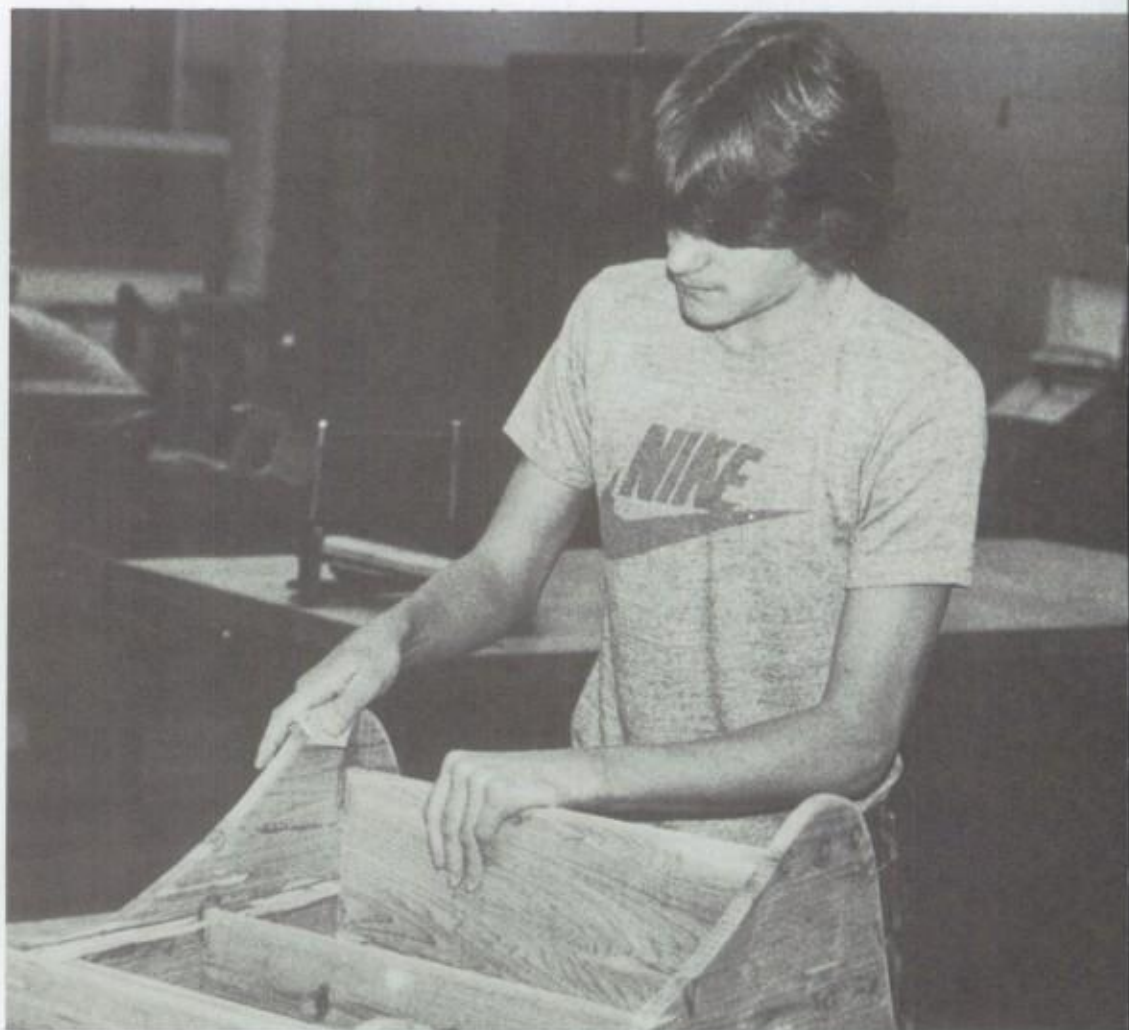

The Industrial Arts Department taught many students an applicable talent that they could use in a trade upon graduation. Of these students a majority pursue careers in a related field. They find this background that have received through these various classes extremely useful to them.

The industrial arts students in the past have benefited greatly from the fine job the instructors, department head, Mr. Charlie Kuntz, Mr. James Tarr, and Mr. William Walker have done in teaching them these helpful skills.

There are very few courses taught at South in which one can receive a more tangible education than in one of the classes provided through the industrial arts program here.

class. Woodcrafting is one of the classes offered.

Home Ec. Offers Variety; Students Gain Experience

Two hundred and fifty South Side students spend every day sewing, cooking, and developing their skills in child care and human relations. All students are all involved in the Home Economics Department.

This department offers a variety of classes in the areas of cooking, sewing, and human development. Students develop an understanding of the skills needed to build successful lives.

In Human Development, a class open to juniors and seniors, students take part in simulations of marriage and its complications to prepare them for their futures.

The most popular feature of this class is the use of eggs as imitations of real babies. The students must take care of the egg babies as if they were real children.

Everyone likes a good cook, but few people realize all of the hard work in developing culinary talents. The foods class also is taught many important aspects of nutrition and its effects on our health.

Many sewing students enjoy the compliments given to them when they sport the clothes they make. Students experience personal satisfaction and feelings of accomplishment when taking a piece of material and creating clothing.

Whether participating in child care, sewing, cooking, or the development of human relations, students are given the opportunity to achieve goals for themselves as well as prepare for their futures outside of high school.

▲ "Is it a boy or a girl?" The proud parents of egg babies in Human Development learn to deal with the problems of parenthood.

◀ Dawn Mason, sophomore, works with Michelle Andrews, junior, in carefully measuring and preparing the ingredients for potato soup.

◀ Heidi Glass, Felicia Anderson, and Chris Fuhrman, sophomores, all complete their separate tasks as they make prune cobbler.

Giving Color Life

The 1982-83 art classes were designed to exercise and advance students in the different fields of art. Taught by department head Mr. Frank Roberts, and Mr. Albert Jacquay, the art classes delved into such fields of art as drawing, ceramics, sculpturing, wood carving, painting, photography, and many of the other aspects of art.

Classes were divided into five basic categories. Basic skills and use of materials were taught in the beginning art classes. Those classes introduced students to the field of art.

The intermediate classes put to use the skills learned in the beginning class. Some projects assigned were similar, though more advanced than the beginning projects. Advanced classes were for students wishing to continue in art and improve their skills and techniques, new fields of art were introduced and explored in advanced art classes.

The independent art class was open only to students who had completed the required art classes and wished to continue, on their own, in the field of art. Students in this class were required to assign their own projects, set their own deadlines and evaluate themselves accordingly. Students in this class worked with ideas and materials that may not have been stressed in regular art classes.

The photography classes, taught by Roberts, stressed in regular developing of film, and photographic techniques.

► Cindy Willig, sophomore, adds the finishing touches to a clay fruit cup, one of the many projects assigned in Mr. Roberts art class.

◀ Every little detail counts! C. G. Claypool, senior, molds a clay figure, making sure that his work is perfect.

Strings: A Hard Challenge Met

Anyone who has ever heard a professional orchestra perform knows how beautiful the sound of stringed instruments can be. Here at South Side a class is offered for those who enjoy playing stringed instruments and wish to improve their abilities as well as perform in concerts for their fellow students.

Although a stringed instrument is a very difficult one to master, the orchestra handled the challenge very well. This year South Side was treated to three different concerts as well as a number of music assemblies which featured these fine musicians.

The beautiful music created by the orchestra is made possible only by the hard work and determination of the members.

Mr. Robert Drummond, Music Department head, commented, "In many ways, we have made good progress this year. Hopefully by the time of the May concert, we'll have reached our peak."

▲ Frankie Jones, freshman, listens intently to instructions given to him by his teacher before playing his bass violin.

Choir Expands

One sector of the Music Department commonly overlooked is the vocal section. South had two choirs this year, the concert choir and the varsity choir.

The concert choir, under the direction of Mr. Robert Drummond, department head, consisted of predominantly upperclassmen. Mr. David Streeter directed the varsity choir, consisting largely of freshmen.

In choir, many different styles were explored. The selections ranged from classical to pop and folk to Broadway tunes. All were worked to perfection before they were performed for any audience.

Performances were mainly in the forms of Music Department concerts. Occasionally, the choirs were asked to perform for a special function in both the school and community.

Although not exposed much, South had two very fine choirs that eagerly invited everyone to listen in on the fine music.

▼ Peeking up from a parade rest, various guard members think of the upcoming city contest they are about to compete in.

Dance For Me

As football and basketball play retreat from their playing grounds halftime, the South Side Guard begins its work.

Halftime performances last only a few short minutes, it seems, but months and weeks of hard work go into them. Summer practices include a week-long "band camp" at South from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. The first-period guard class is also necessary for basketball halftime show development.

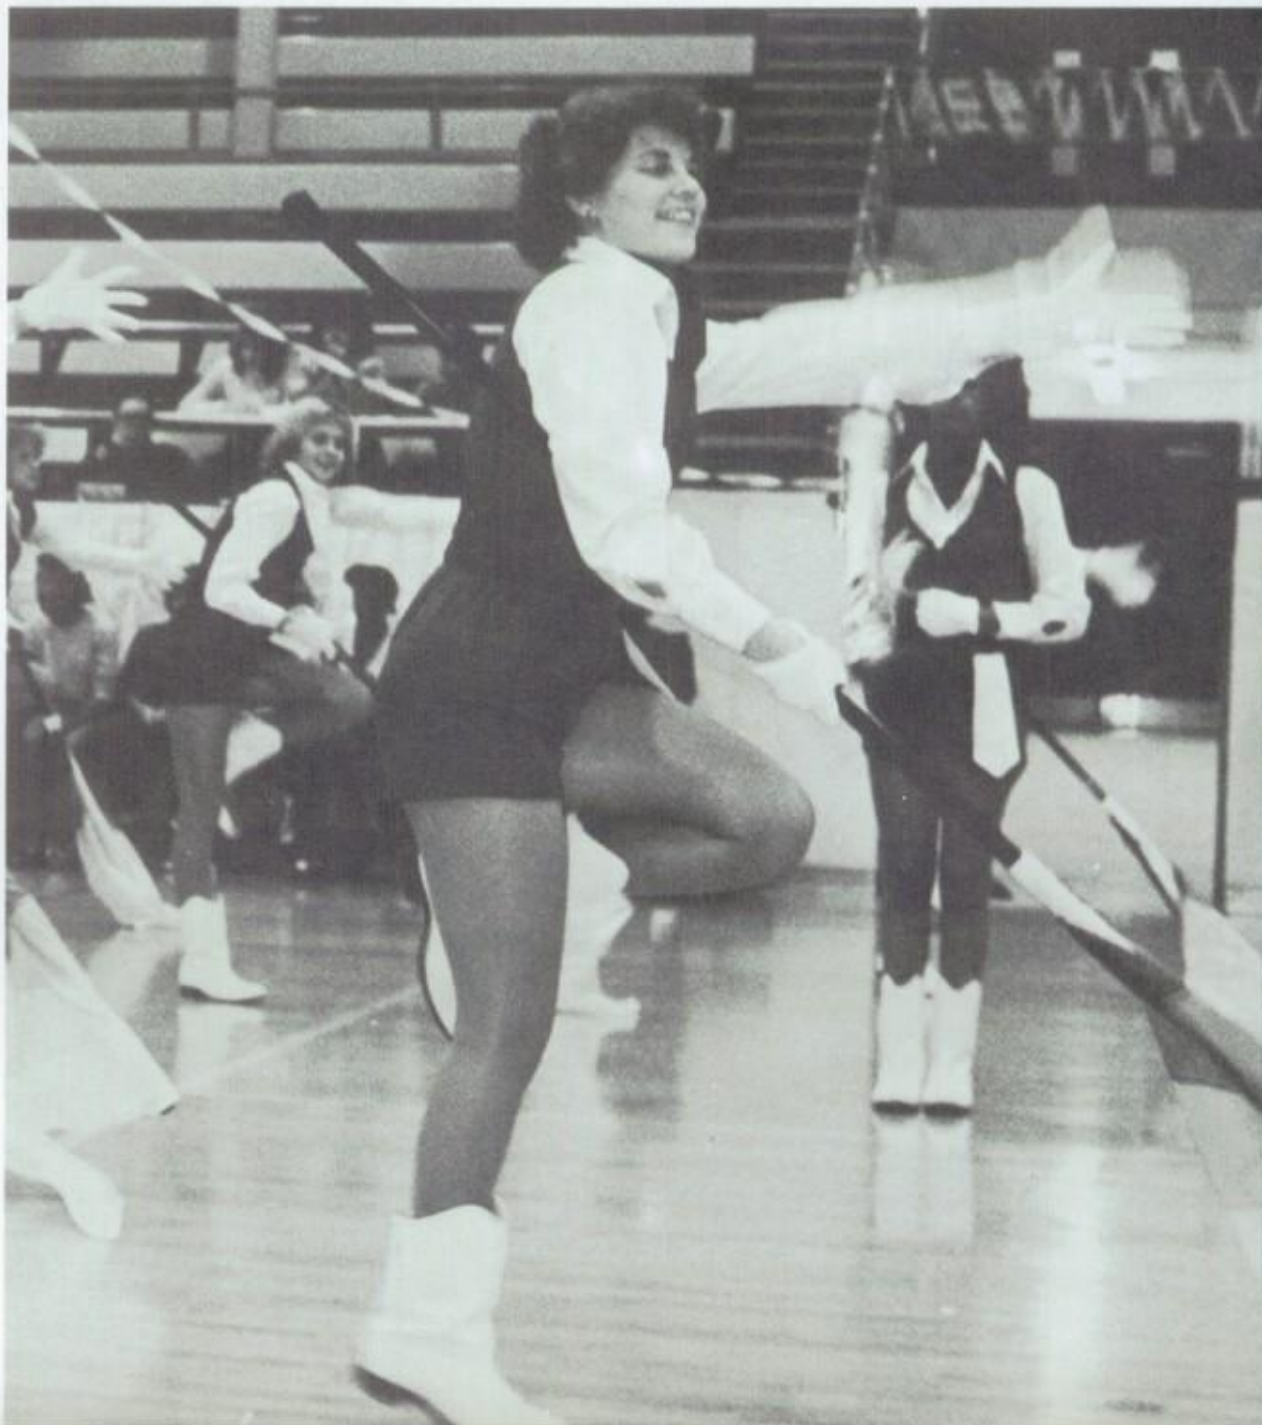

The guard consists of 24 members. Captains serve as follows: Dan Harter, dance captain; Pam Strom, rifle captain; and Erin Craig, flag captain.

The corps performs various rifle, flag, dance, and combination routines throughout the year. Other performances include parades and other city-wide activities.

Add A Little Jazz

Under the direction of Mr. David Peter, the South Side Jazz Band is always a sure crowd-pleaser. The 20 member band consisted of ten saxes, five trumpets, five trombones, and a five-piece rhythm section. The members of the band were determined by auditions in October. In addition to performing at South Side concerts, this talented ensemble performed in competition three times during the '82-'83 season. On the schedule were the Elmhurst Jazz and Festival, the Northrop Contest, and the Ball State Jazz Band Festival.

▲ During the winter concert, the Jazz Band performed many different numbers, each one enjoyed by the crowd.

▼ The answer, my fellow Archer, is blowing in the wind, says the big green horn line of the South Side Marching Band.

The Green And White Beat

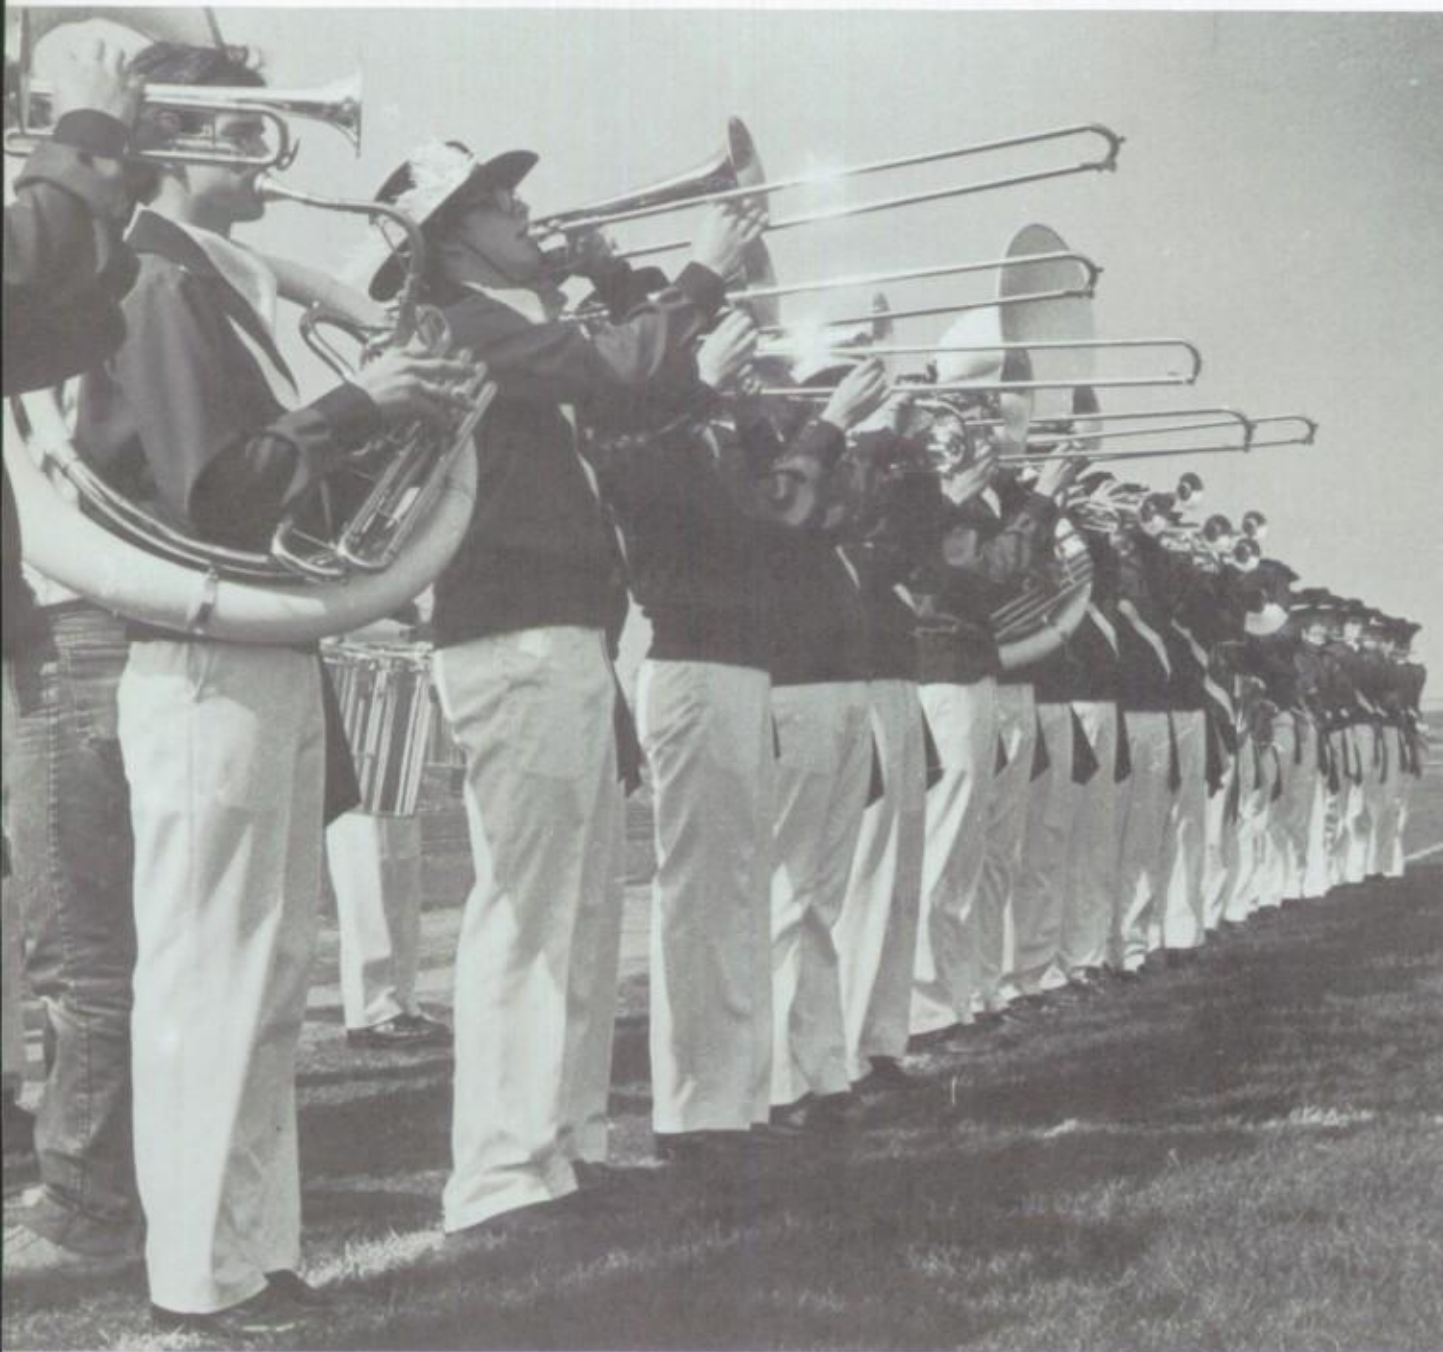

As most of us know, it takes a great deal of pride and determination to make a sports team work. Unfortunately, many people do not realize that it takes the same pride and determination to make a marching band work. This year, the Marching Green Machine of South Side proved that it possessed these qualities.

For the 100 students who comprised the band, their year started early. One week after summer vacation began was the first time the band practiced. These practices continued throughout the rest of the summer. During one week in August, band camp took place at South Side from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day of the week. During band camp, everyone's efforts were concentrated on the construction and perfection of the contest show that would be performed at the ISSMA contest. This was the show that was also performed at halftime during all of the home football games.

Under the direction of Mr. David Streeter and his staff, the Marching Green Machine received a score of 69.55 at the ISSMA contest. A score of 70.0 was needed to go on to state competition. "It was a heartbreaking score," stated many band members.

After the marching season is over the members of the marching band form the pep band. The pep band plays at the home basketball games. Roger Davis, senior, stated, "Playing in the pep band gives you the chance to perform for people without having to worry about their judging your performance."

Band Comes In From The Cold

Once all the practicing and hard work are over for the marching band, one might wonder what the band does during those winter months. Rather than spending many hours outside marching and playing, the members spend their time inside rehearsing in the Concert Band.

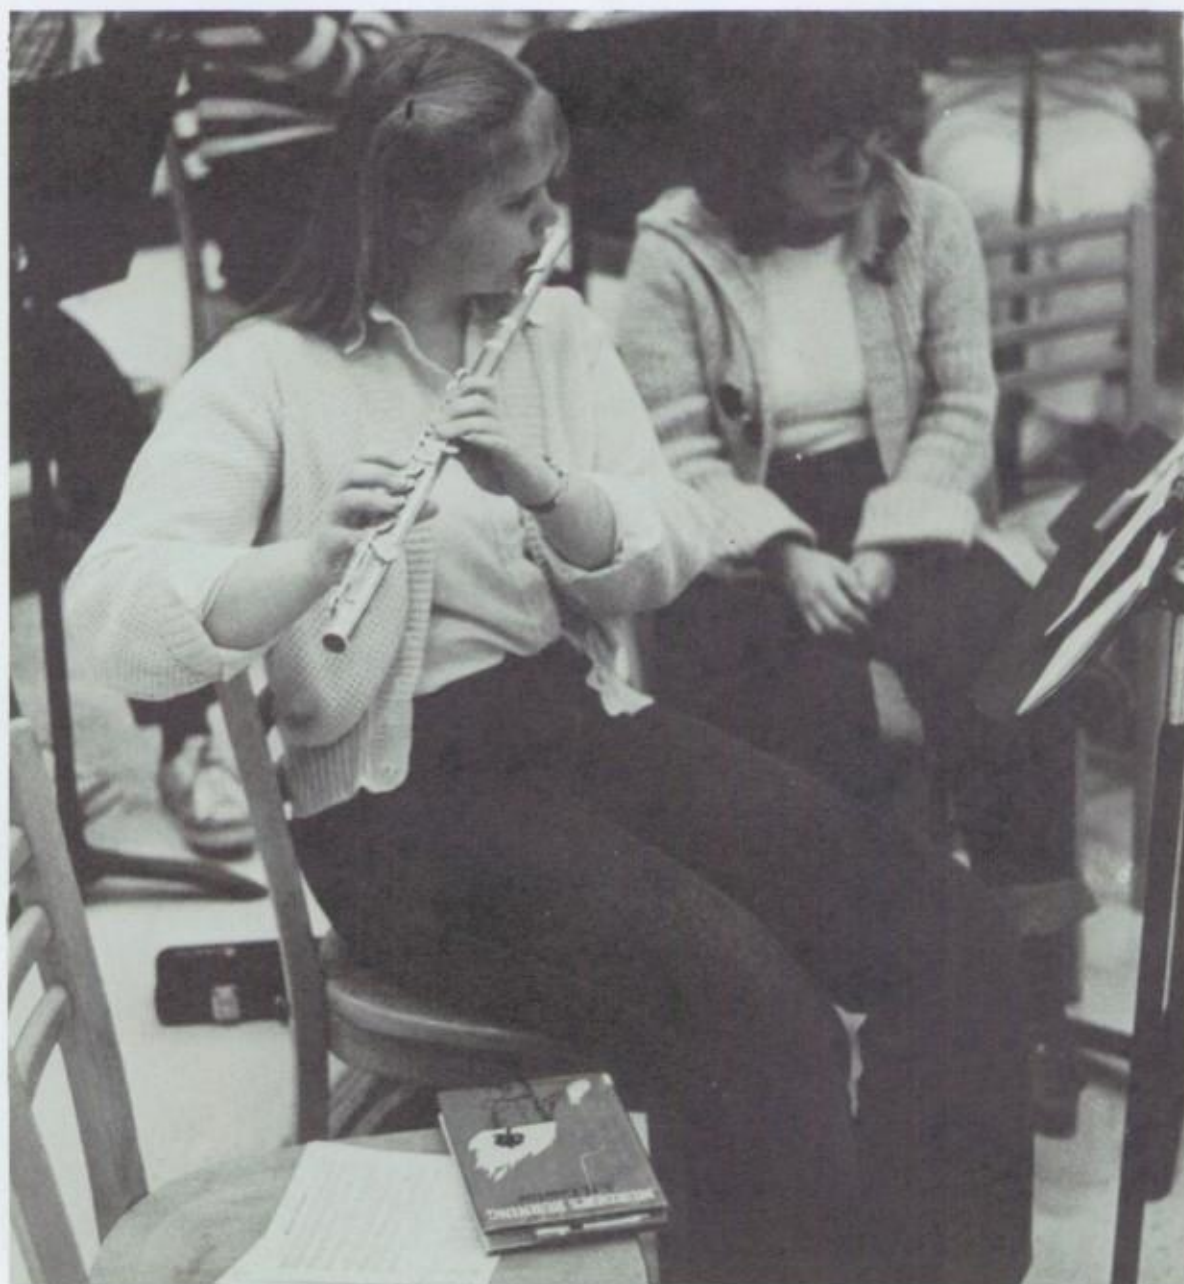

Though marching band offers a much more exciting atmosphere, Concert Band has advantages also. The band can spend its time inside in the band room rather than outside in the summer heat or cold of autumn.

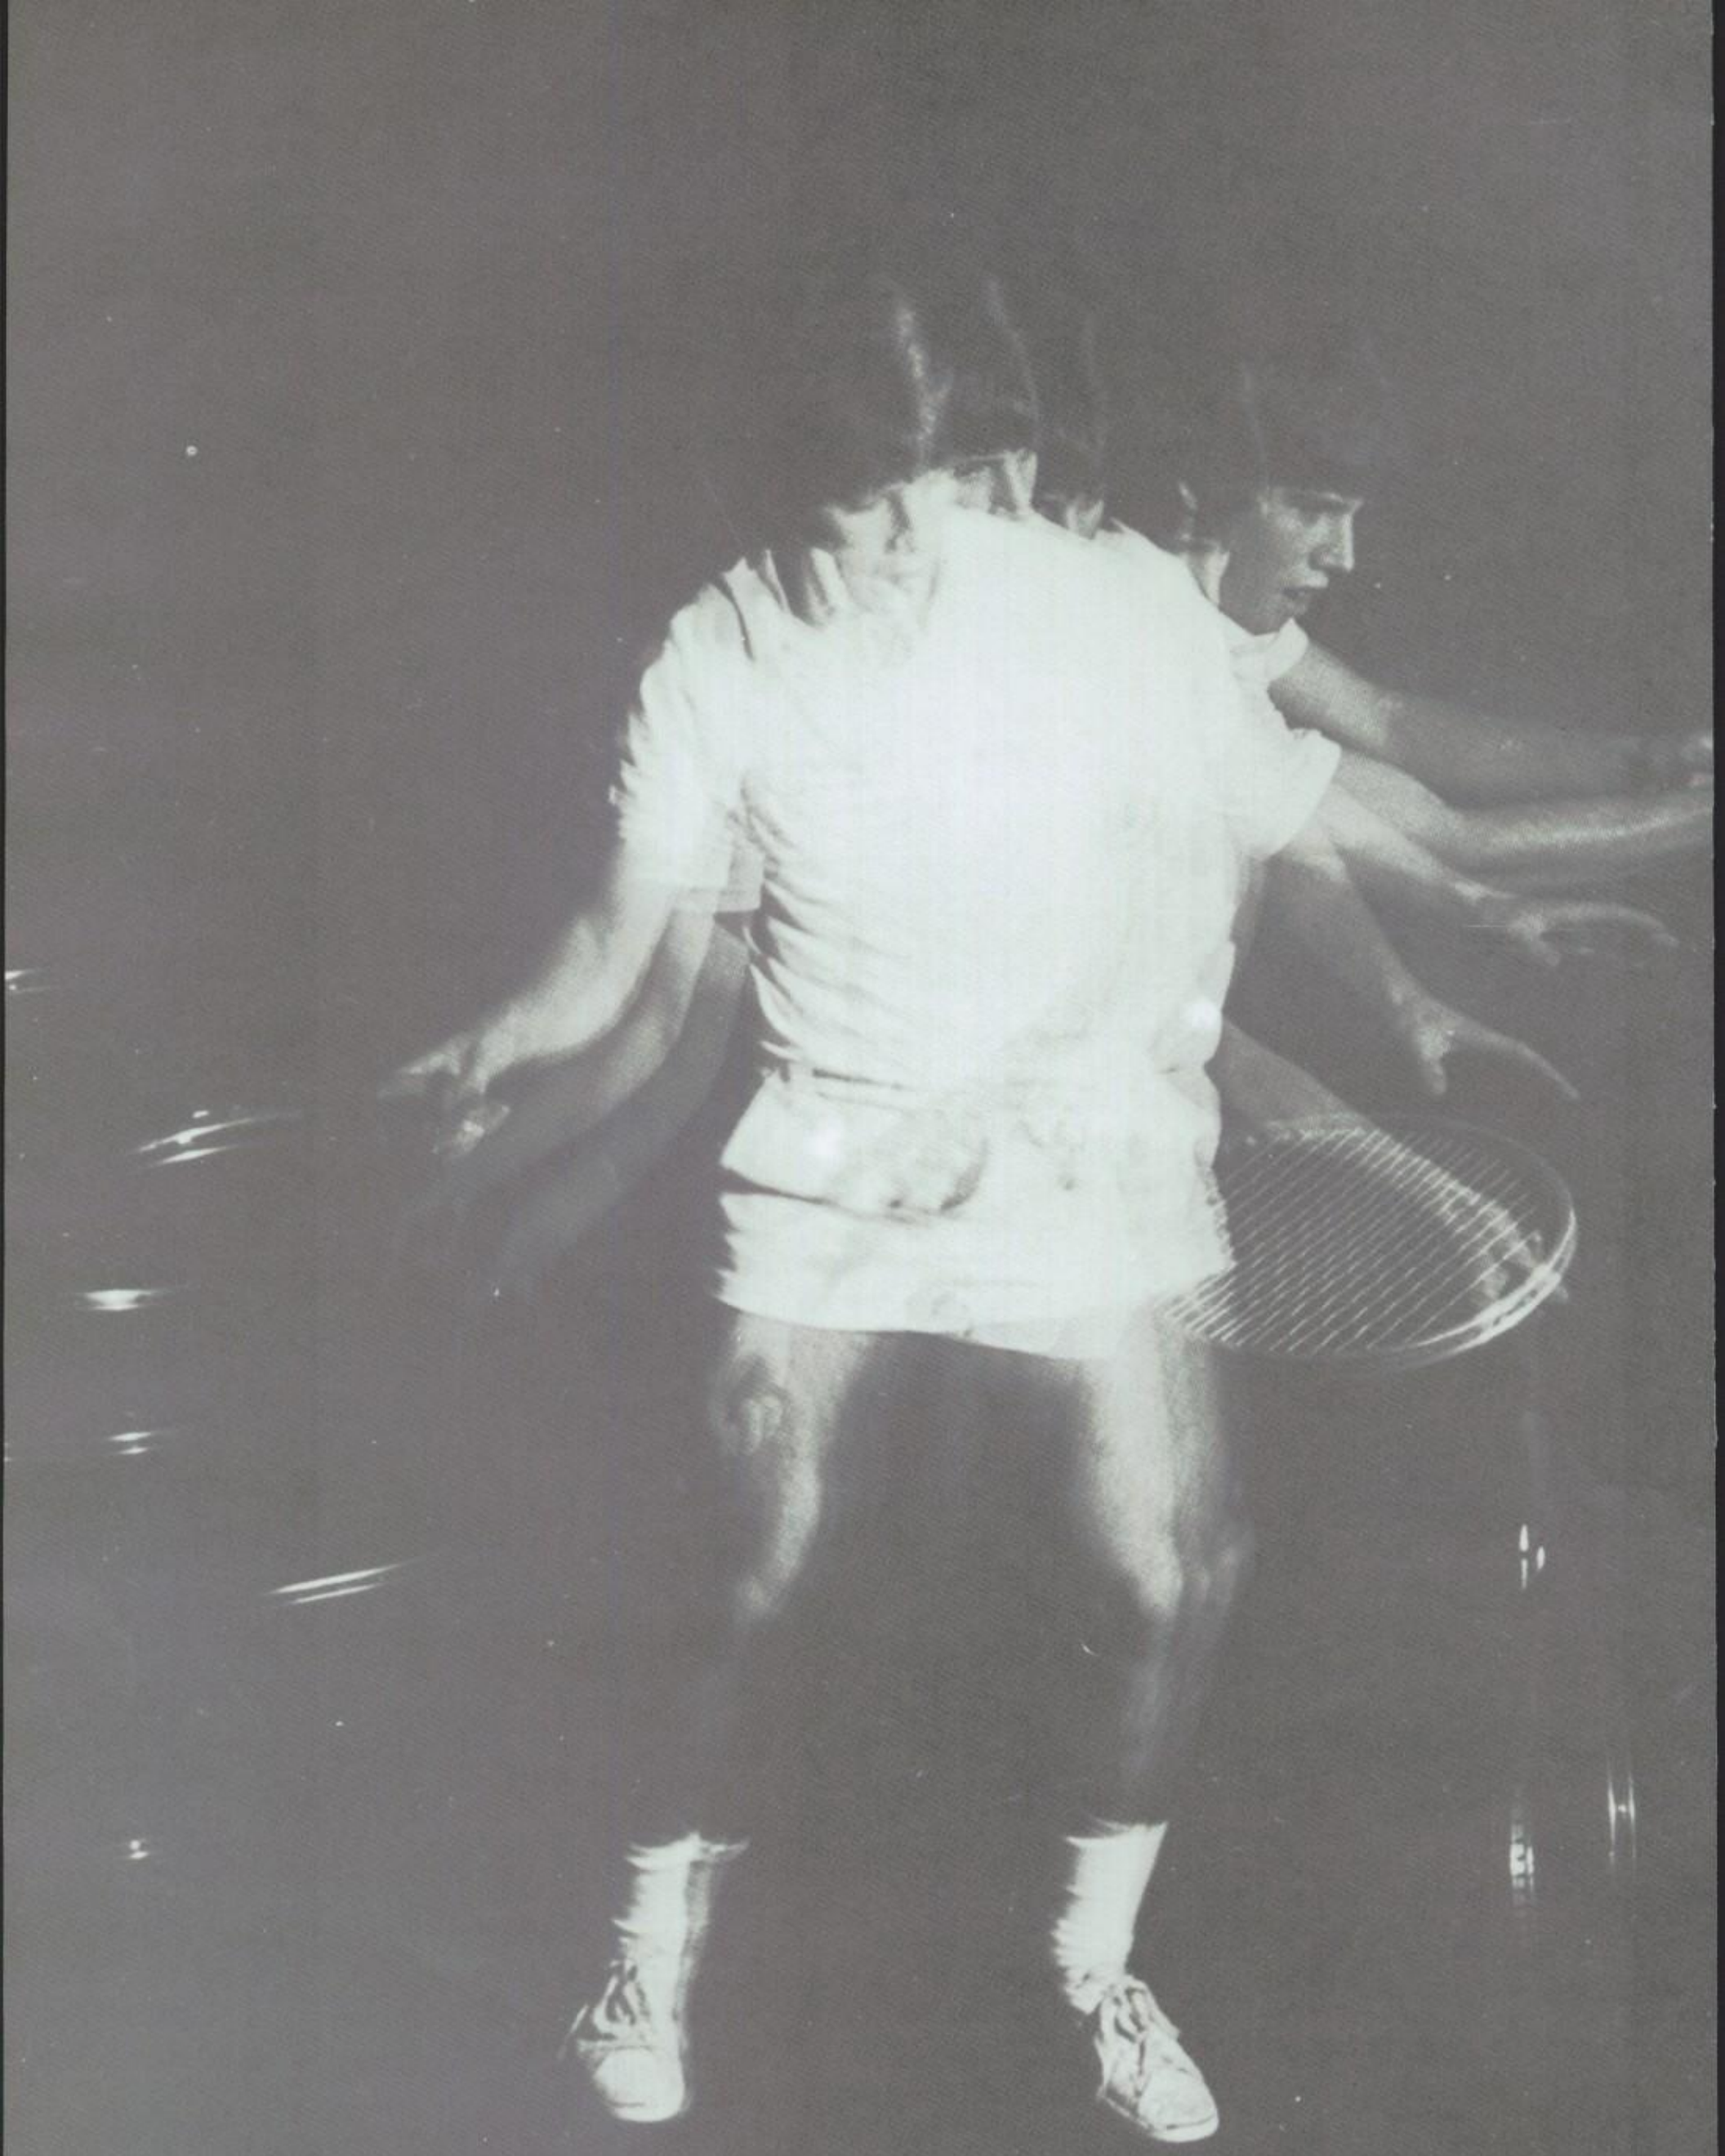

Mr. David Streeter led the band in rehearsing and perfecting many songs. The band found more time to work on its music talents without the time needed to practice marching. Some members practiced individually and went on to district solos.

With the skill and agility needed to master the sport of tennis, John Colvin, senior, slows down to display his perfection.

United, Powerful

It came down to hard work, cooperation, practicing, and rebuilding, as South Side's girls' track team fought to regain its old status as the state's dominant track team.

"Our goal was rebuilding," said Cathey Tyree, junior. "That goal held us together."

All the practice showed in their performances. They took fourth at both the Northrop Invitational and the sectionals. They proceeded to polish that performance, and finished second at regionals. The girls ended up in a respectable seventh at state.

"We still need lots of work," said one team member, "but now we are a team. We work together, and it's fun. And because we get along so well and now know ourselves better, we're going to do better. Wait until you see us next year!"

Coach Roberta Widmann feels that the rebuilding is reflected in the six wins, five losses record for the spring of 1982. But she'll be back there fighting alongside the team, as the girls continue to make their hard work pay off.

As a sports writer for the Fort Wayne Newspapers said when writing of South Side's girls' track team, "It's not the quantity that counts; it's the quality."

▲ You deserve a break today. So believes tired, overworked Archer after a long and exhausting track meet.

◀ Alisa Thompson, sophomore, takes off, forgetting to reach back for the baton from Sherri McPherson, senior.

Better 'Times' Ahead

Determination, dedication, and pure Archer pride were again the dominant factors that stood behind the 1981-82 track team.

To prepare for a highly competitive spring season, these Archer men started their training shortly after Christmas under the superior coaching staff of Mr. William Walker and Mr. Walter Bartkiewicz.

As the season opened, high expectations were had by all for another victorious track team. The winning of the prestigious Richmond relays was a positive sign that the Archers were off to a great start.

Coach Bartkiewicz, who constantly stresses the importance of "mental toughness and clean living" in an athlete, trained the field events men. Coach Walker put his efforts toward the sprinters. Former student and athlete Jose Mendez assisted the distance squad.

It was an up-and-down season for the team, as Coach Walker comments: "We figured we'd be no worse than the top five in the state toward the end of the season. But, due to various factors, we didn't end up there!"

Those Archers that made it to regionals were Robert Davis and Michael Paul, seniors. Their events were the long jump and the shot put, respectively.

Rodney Thompson, senior, went to the state meet in the long jump. For the second year in a row, Gary Stewart, senior, went to state in the high jump.

The team members voted Blair Harper, senior, the Most Valuable Player in the running events. Rodney Thompson, senior, was awarded the Most Valuable Player in the field events. The Outstanding Underclassman Award was given to David Osterman, sophomore.

Many lettermen and other eager runners are returning. The coaching staff is waiting with smiles and high hopes of carrying on the green and white Archer tradition of having another fine track season this spring.

Archers' Webb

Improving their skill and gaining victories, the Archer girls' tennis team finished the 1982 season with a record of 4-10.

The girls' new coach, J. Webb Horton, assistant pro at Wildwood Racquet Club, helped the team members with their technique and their attitudes.

Horton feels that the three most important factors of having a good team are pride, consistency, and dedication.

Through these three ideas, the girls' tennis team was strengthened both on the varsity and reserve levels.

New to the girls this year, the varsity team consisted of three singles players and two doubles teams.

Playing number one singles was Maria Christen, senior; number two singles, Margy Nold, junior; number three singles, Debbie Fogel, sophomore; number one doubles, Jane Graf and Sharon Maier, seniors; and number two doubles, Jennifer Graham and Becky Schaab, sophomores.

The reserve team consisted of Beth Keller and Karen Cronkhite, seniors; Sally Cavell and Francina Tuesca, juniors; Libby Leal, Joy Lohse, Debbie Bennett, Lynelle Brissette, sophomores; Kristie Malott and Peggy Newton, freshmen.

Even with the loss of four senior players, the Archer team looked to 1983 as a season of new potential and further improvement.

Improvement Shown

South Side's golf team has been improving slowly but surely for the last three years, with the team reversing its SAC record of 6-12 in 1981 to 12-6 in 1982. The team's 17-8 overall finish was the best in years. Coach Richard Melton attributed the improvement to the fact that "we virtually had the same team back. When you lose only one varsity player, you know you're going to be tough."

Though the team finished eighth in sectionals, Matt Didier, senior, played well enough to be forced into a playoff for a trip to regionals. The sudden-death playoff lasted five holes, with the Archer team following the action. It ended on the slippery Brookwood Golf Course greens when Matt took one too many putts.

The season was wrapped up at the Spring Sports Banquet with awards going to the golfers on the varsity team. Gold pins were awarded to Matt Didier, Senior, and Scott Hall, junior. Silver pins went to John Didier, junior, and Pete Gemmer, sophomore, and Rich Diester, junior, received a varsity letter and a bronze pin for participation on the varsity team.

Those who contributed to the reserve action of the golf team were Todd Anderson, sophomore, George Baldus, freshman, Brian Parker, freshman, and Rich Miller, senior.

It is hoped that the 1983 season will yield the best golf team in South Side history with four of the five varsity players returning.

Baseball Strong In Finish

The baseball team of 1982 was cited by Coach Dean Doerffler as "a good team, which had a real strong finish." The team finished the season with a record of 5-4 in the Summit Athletic Conference. One of the highlights of the season was the doubleheader against DeKalb. South Side won, being one of few teams to ever upset DeKalb in a doubleheader, a rated team at the time of the game. Also, the team did a tremendous job in sectional playoffs, losing to Dwenger in the last inning of the game, with a close score, 4-3. "A very disappointing defeat," commented Doerffler.

Outstanding members of the team were Keith Varketta and Shannon Stanfield, seniors. Both members of the team were voted, by their teammates, as Most Valuable Players. Varketta received All-City team by a unanimous decision. He set school records for the best batting average and he hit more home runs than any other player in the history of South Side baseball. Stanfield was short-stop for the team, and represented the team on the mound with a 5-1 pitching average. The team noted Bob Schloss, senior, Most Valuable Defensive Player, and Pete Weaver, senior, received the team's recognition as the player with the best mental attitude.

The weather factor last spring made it hard to get the season started. Not only was it difficult to practice indoors, but it was also very discouraging. Once the flood-soaked diamond did dry, the team began practicing outdoors.

Doerffler is not with South this spring, and he commented that "I hated to give up baseball and go as great as South has on the team."

▼ It's going to be a close one! As Bob Schloss, senior slides into base, the umpire watches carefully to make a fair call.

Pride Sustains Archers

Before the season had ever begun, many people were predicting that South Side's football team would have a winless season. The reason for this was the Archers' lack of size, depth, and experience. However, under the leadership of head coach, Frank Houk, and his assistant coaches Bartkiewicz, Fireoved, and Nichols, the Archers pulled themselves together to form a true team. The football team motto, "It's not me, It's We," was continually stressed throughout the season.

Another vital element of the South Side football team was the extremely high pride factor it upheld for itself as well as for the school it represented. The Archers' seasonal record finished at 4-6, while their Summit Athletic Conference play stood at 3-4. Quarterback Ken Christie, senior, finished second in SAC passing with a total of 1,008 yards.

As for rushing, tailback Darryn Nichols, junior, finished fifth in the city with a total of 824 yards. Mark Sander, senior, as tackle, continued to crush opposing players for his third consecutive starting season.

Injuries also plagued the Archers throughout the season. Brian Nierman, senior, was sidelined for a major portion of the year because of a severe ankle injury. Another problem that South had to face was the fact that many of the varsity players had to start on both offense and defense.

Tight end Joe Billingsley, senior, felt, "South had a great team this season despite the record. We all played with positive attitudes and no one ever gave up. The North Side game proves that."

Quarterback Joe Slick, sophomore, checks in ways before running, as the Archer line-backles any possible threats.

▼ The offensive line makes its move as planned in order to gain the needed yardage for a first down.

Quality Gained

After a rough start against two of the city's best, Snider and Bishop Dwenger, the Archer reserve football team came back strong.

The reserve team first defeated Elmhurst, then victimized the North Side Redskin team. Although the Archer team was defeated next by Northrop, it quickly came back to destroy the Wayne Generals, showing much of "Archer Pride."

October 18 brought the Concordia Cadets to the Archer field and they brought another well-earned victory for the Archer team.

The final game, played once again against the North Side Redskins, resulted in a loss for the Archer team.

The reserve squad was coached this season by two extremely effective coaches, Mr. Dave Firewood, head and defensive coach, and Mr. Don Nichols, offensive and also freshman coach.

"This year we lacked depth. Because of our limited numbers, we played many freshmen in every reserve game," quoted Joe Slick, a legendary Archer pride showman throughout the 1982 reserve football season, and it is these determined reserve players that may compete and make successful the future varsity football team at South Side.

Freshmen Record First Winning Season

After the varsity football players have finished practice, the football field becomes empty. This is not the case for long, though, as the freshman football team practiced many long, hard hours, most of these in the evening after the varsity football team practiced, and on Saturday mornings. All their hard work paid off as they became the first freshman football team to have a winning season in the history of South Side High School. The season was highlighted with victories over Snider and Norwell, both of whom had been previously undefeated for the last three years. Some of the outstanding players on the team this year included Andred Hicks and Jovan Wright, tailbacks; Greg Peoples, fullback; Alex Adams, guard; and Jeff Livensparger, center. All of these players also played in reserve and varsity games.

The freshman football coach, Mr. Donn Nichols, attributed the team's winning season to "spirit, mental attitude, and the determination to succeed."

Mr. Frank Houk, head football coach, stated, "I am looking forward to coaching this team in the upcoming years. It has been the finest bunch of freshmen athletes ever in the past nine years."

Cross Country Has Positive Season

Running, running, and more running—this was the schedule our cross country men followed since early August.

Under the experienced direction of first-year coach Dan Auer, this Archer team had a successful season.

The practices that prepare these men to endure the painful race varied from day to day. Oftentimes, a run of five to seven miles preceded a spring workout on the track. Weight training was also included in their work-outs.

Is it possible to like a man that puts you through pain, torture, and agony in practice? To this question Carl Sinninger answered, "Coach Auer is a really good coach. He made us work hard, but it was for our own good."

The Archers placed eighth in the sectional meet, and were three places short from advancing to the regionals.

Only four lettermen returned for the 1982 season. They were David Mendez, sophomore, Jim Stockman, junior, and seniors Jim Christie and Cliff Eppler.

Paul Lehman commented, "Our season wasn't the best, but it wasn't the worst either. Everyone tried hard, and that's what counts! We had a lot of good times. I'm proud to have been a member of the Archer cross country team!"

Team Young, Gifted

The girls' cross country team leaped into a rebuilding season this year with an underclass squad, composed primarily of freshmen and sophomores. They had only five returning letter winners from the previous year.

Even though the team did not win a meet all year, Mrs. Roberta Widmann, coach of the girls' cross country team, said the following about the team, "As a young team, they were always improving. Each race they tried harder and attained better times and place finishes."

Team captain Peggy Ott, junior, was also pleased with the way the season progressed, "But next season will be even better."

The returning cross country runners for the year included Ott, Sue Berry, and Michelle Smith, all juniors; and Julie Auld and Amy Daley, sophomores. New runners for the season included Benita Brewer, sophomore; Joy Nielsen, Roxanne Johnson, and Anita Mendez, freshmen.

Coach Widmann felt that her team lived up to its potential. A school record was even set in the thousand-meter run. Anita Mendez ran it in 11:58.

"Several of our best runners were out for one or two races this season due to injuries," stated Coach Widmann. As closing comment on the year she stated, "Overall, they gave fine performances at every meet. I was very pleased with their hard work and dedication."

The 1982 Volleyball season was one of advancements mixed with frustrations. The record this year's team accumulated was better than almost any other in South Side's history.

Progress was made in areas such as offensive quickness and team unity. Mental intensity caused a few point breaks for the Archer squad.

The volleyball team was head-coached by Miss Deb Cook. This was her first year as head coach for South. Miss Cook's locker room tactics helped the girls think only of volleyball before a match.

Miss Cook's assistant was Miss Tinda Zimmerman. This was Miss Zimmerman's first year, yet her enthusiasm about the game was a coaching aid for her inexperienced players.

The tremendous home-crowd support the 1982 volleyball team received has never been equaled. The roar of the crowd echoed in the close games this squad played. The team appreciated this following.

"We thrived on the crowd's cheers. It made all the dives and sprawls worth it," stated one member of the varsity squad.

No team tromped this squad. This caused much frustration for the volleyball team because repeatedly was beaten by two-point margins.

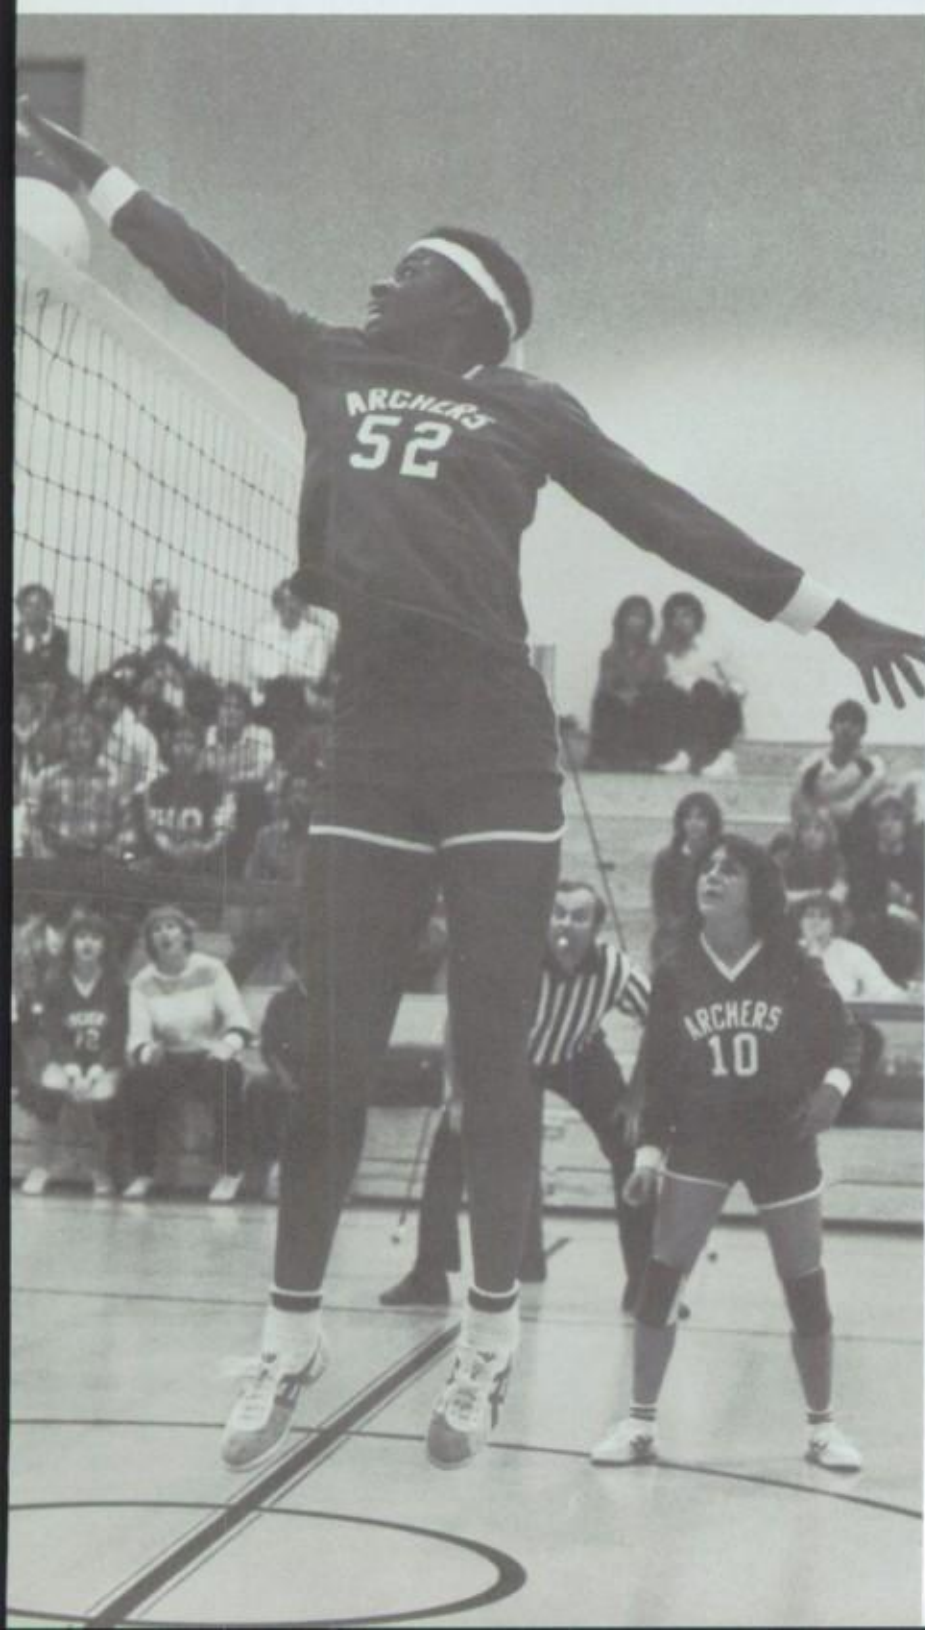

The year ended with a first round sectional loss in an extremely close game pitted against the Snider Panthers. Even though the season ended in a loss, enough progress was made with the team and coaches' efforts that the 1982 volleyball squad was a success.

Next year there will be five out of eight girls returning to the varsity squad. The three seniors co-captains were Beth Hofmann, Cathey Tyree and Ellen Arnold. This was a year to be proud of on the court.

Champions

Varsity Ranked In State

In one of the most bitter rivalries in the state, the Archers boy's varsity basketball team defeated the fourth-ranked Marion Giants, 61-60, at South Side on December 18. It was one of the most exciting games played in South Side's gymnasium in years. When the final buzzer sounded, Archer fans exploded onto the court, celebrating a long-awaited victory over the Giants.

The win over Marion was just the start of a long stretch in which South won 11 of 12 games, interrupted only by a loss to Elmhurst in overtime.

In that stretch of victories, South Side fans watched the Archers bring home the Holiday Tournament trophy for the third time in four years.

In Coach Terry Flynn's second season at the helm, he had only four seniors to work with. They included Steve Jackson, Alex Tatum, Charles Moore, and Mike Sollberger.

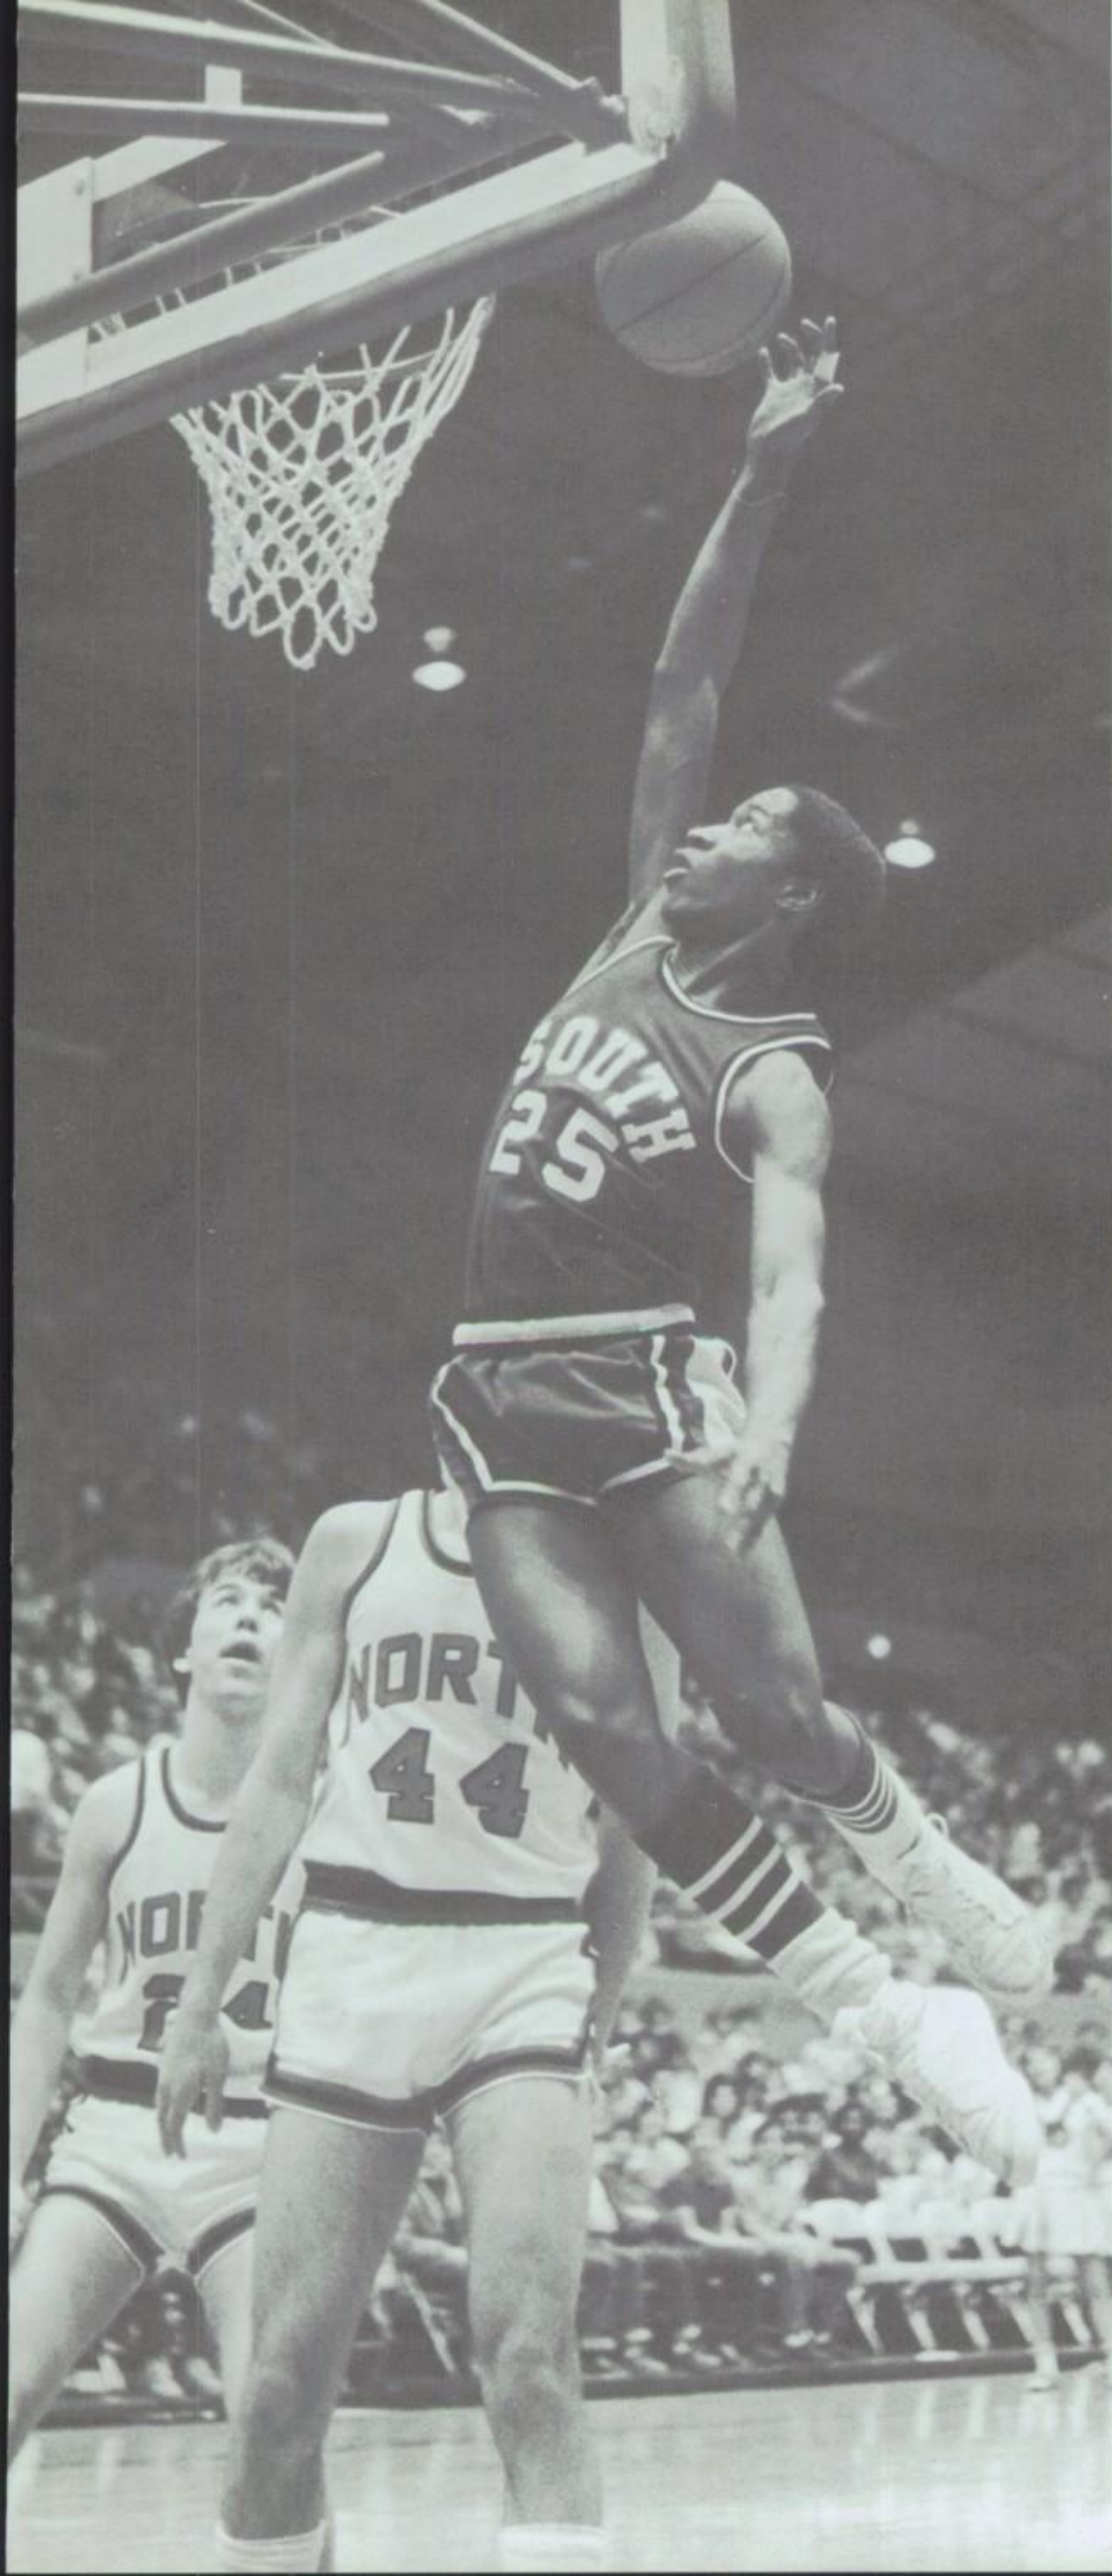

Jackson led the SAC in scoring by averaging over 20 points per game. He was a second-year starter and team co-captain. Tatum was South's most improved player and had good quickness. He usually guarded the opponents' quickest player.

Moore was the Archers' floor leader and team co-captain. He was also a second-year starter. He leaves South Side holding a school record when he connected on 18 straight free throws his junior year.

Sollberger was the backup center who came in and helped in a number of games. He was probably the shortest center in town but a good athlete. Sollberger was a two-sport letterman.

The juniors on the team were Ed Starks and Charles Rowland. Starks was the starting forward and second leading scorer on the team, while Rowland came in at guard for his defensive and ballhandling abilities.

Reserves Look Ahead

The 1982-83 boys' reserve basketball team was led through an impressive season by Coach Craig Taylor. The team was predominantly sophomore, with a few juniors. Although lacking in height, the team made up for this deficiency with quickness and good fundamentals, which helped make the year a success.

The starting line-up had a few minor changes, but through a majority of the games, the same boys made up the front line. Rod Scott and Ron Keller were guards, Gent Montgomery and Cressie Fowlkes were forwards, and Joe Slick was starting center.

Charlie Wemhoff, junior, stated that "for a sophomore-dominated team, we showed great improvement throughout the year; but overall I would say our season was a great success."

Varsity Coach Terry Flynn looks forward to receiving the quality and potential of this young team for varsity performance in the years to follow.

The freshman basketball team, coached by Jeff Lee, was a well-balanced team, using every player in every game. And, with the advantage of using his bench, Lee was able to substitute freely to keep a fresh squad in at all times.

Lee went mostly with Mark Barnfield, Tim Sheppard, Tracy Jackson, Greg Peoples, and Javon Wright as his starting five, although this line-up did vary from game to game. And with strong off-the-bench performances by Donald Clark, Eddie Anderson, and LaBronz Davis, the Archers were able to defeat nine out of their area opponents.

It was an exceptionally fast team, and players used their quickness also as an advantage to chalk up many steals that assisted in many fast-break layups.

Fourth In SAC

This year's girls' varsity basketball team was coached by newcomer Dan Auer. Taking over the spot of Mrs. Roberta Widmann, Auer led the girls to the runner-up position in sectionals this year. The team posted an 8-8 record season, 5-4 in the SAC. The team's record was enough to capture fourth place in the SAC tournament.

Cathey Tyree, senior and captain of the squad, stated, "The basketball team was made up of young players this year. At times it got very frustrating, but the younger players became more alert and experienced as the season progressed. The team was great to work with, and I am going to miss them."

This year's team was indeed a young one. Of the eight girls on the team, only two were seniors. Other members included three sophomores, one junior, and two freshmen.

The reserve team of the 1982-83 season was coached by Miss Lori Johnson. Consisting of seven freshmen, the reserve team's record was 2-7.

Weight-loss, running, strict training and great stamina were all essential to the making of the 1983 South Side wrestling team. The team following these essentials began its season in mid-October and finished up in February.

South Side had a very young team, primarily made up of freshmen and sophomore wrestlers. Team captains Jordan Lebamoff and John (Lightning) Miller, juniors, made up the backbone of the Archer squad while they led the rest of South's wrestlers through a tough and demanding season.

Highlights of the South Side wrestling season consisted of the performances of the team captain. Miller won the SAC title at 145 while Lebamoff topped off his season with a fourth-place semi-state finish.

Coach Howard Savage was assisted this year by South Side graduate, Stacey Tribolet. Working together, coaches and wrestlers developed the needed essentials for a strong and proper team, sure to return even more victorious to hold the title as South Side wrestlers.

Gymnasts Confident

With the fourth coach in four years reporting new uniforms, the South Side gymnastics team walked into the gymnasium with a feeling of confidence that has never before been prevalent in South Side's gymnastics history.

The coach this year was Terri Bade, who was a gymnast herself and had competed for the Wayne Nationals. She was assisted by Lynn Myers, a former Archer gymnast.

"Gymnastics is a sport that takes a lot of time and money," said Bade. "The dedication that this year's team showed was amazing and it made progress steady throughout the year."

Made up of mostly underclass members, the team hopes that each year's progress will be built upon.

"South Side should have a lovely team this year," said senior member Mindy Pape. "If all the freshmen and sophomores return, they'll be a powerful unit."

SAC Title Retained

South Side, led by the experience of four returning lettermen, retained the S.A.C. title for the second straight year. The four returning lettermen were Brad Fenner, senior, number-one singles player and team captain; John Colvin, senior, number-two singles player; Doug Rowe, senior, number-three singles player, and Chris Miller, junior.

For the first time in the history of the South Side tennis team, a rigorous pre-season training program consisting of two practices averaging five hours a day was undertaken. Before the actual matches began, Coach Rick Hanauer established many goals, one of which was to repeat history and win the S.A.C. title.

"I feel we possessed some of the best talent we've had for quite some time. We had a great deal of experience, and most of our players knew what to do in pressure situations," commented Hanauer.

This fact was proved as first-year players Ted DeBrine, senior, and Dan Bromley, junior, teamed up at number-two doubles to fight off darkness and grasp the victorious point to defeat the undefeated Snider Panthers to win the city championship.

Hanauer commented about the team. "Miller and Joe Deitche, freshman, (11-4) starting at first doubles had a prosperous season. Doug Rowe (13-2) probably had the best serve and volley combination in the S.A.C. John Colvin (13-2) using great stamina usually wore down his opponents. Fenner, undefeated in the S.A.C., was able to advance to Concordia after the team's sectional loss. Overall we had a good varsity season, backed by a strong and dedicated reserve squad."

South Cheerleading Fun and 'Games'

"We've-got-spirit! S P I R I T spirit!" Eighteen South Side Archers in particular show their spirit throughout the year in various ways. These Archers are the cheerleaders. Cheerleading includes many different activities that all support the Archer teams.

Tryouts for cheerleading are held in early May with the selection of six girls per squad. The selection is based on voice projection, coordination, originality, and how well a girl can represent South Side. A senior girl is also chosen to be the mascot. This year Leah Hackelman was the Archer. This spot includes not only cheering but also doing gymnastics.

Much practice is needed before school ever begins. This starts with two practices a week during the summer months. At the end of August the varsity squad competed at the Indiana State Fair.

Once school begins, the cheerleaders are kept busy supporting the various sports' teams and trying to raise spirit throughout South Side. This is done through spirit days and pep sessions. These activities give Archers the chance to back their athletes throughout the year.

"Cheerleading is a lot of hard work, but the satisfaction of supporting the athletes makes it well worth it," says captain Ellen Arnold, senior.

A lot of time and dedication are definitely what the cheerleaders put into cheerleading. All of the student body and athletes appreciate their work.

A Changing World

The world is always in a state of change. High school changes us by preparing us for the real world. And, just as we are changing, the world around us is changing as well.

In the school year 1982-83, we saw many deaths and tragedies. In Russia, Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet leader, died of a heart attack at the age of 75. Henry Fonda died at the age of 77 after receiving an Academy award for On Golden Pond. Karen Carpenter, of the Carpenters, died as a result of anorexia nervosa. Seven people died after taking cyanide-laced Tylenol in Illinois.

As the world turned, problems were brought up and dealt with. The pornography issue came into the foreground in Fort Wayne as Citizens for Decency began picketing the porn shops. Cuts in social security were debated in Congress. Sales tax in Indiana rose to five percent. Richard Lugar and Dan Coats were elected as senator and congressman to Washington.

This was a year of new beginnings. Princess Diana gave birth to a son, Prince William Arthur Philip Louis. President Reagan made a trip to Latin America and promised better relations with our neighbors to the South. The 1982 World's Fair was in Knoxville, Tennessee. Southtown Mall opened a new addition with over 50 stores.

Prep was still a popular movement, but new wave and GQ clothing styles gradually crept in. Groups such as Devo, Human League, and Men at Work made their way into the charts. Kraftwerk, a German new wave group, began recording in English. Football players went on strike and the Redskins won the Superbowl. The Cardinals won the World Series. E.T. was a successful movie and spawned many E.T. products, ranging from E.T. t-shirts to E.T. napkins.

Overall, it was a year of change throughout the world. We in high school watched carefully, knowing that we would soon be entering this world and becoming the leaders of tomorrow.

Caring, Encouraging Administration

"To risk rather than just ride the wave of complacency, to continue to learn rather than just rest on previous knowledge, and above all to create a positive, caring environment." This is the reply given by Mr. Thomas Gordon, guidance coordinator and freshman counselor, when asked for his goals for the South Side administration.

Above all, he stated, it is important to remember that the one and only purpose of the administrative staff is to facilitate the purpose of school, education.

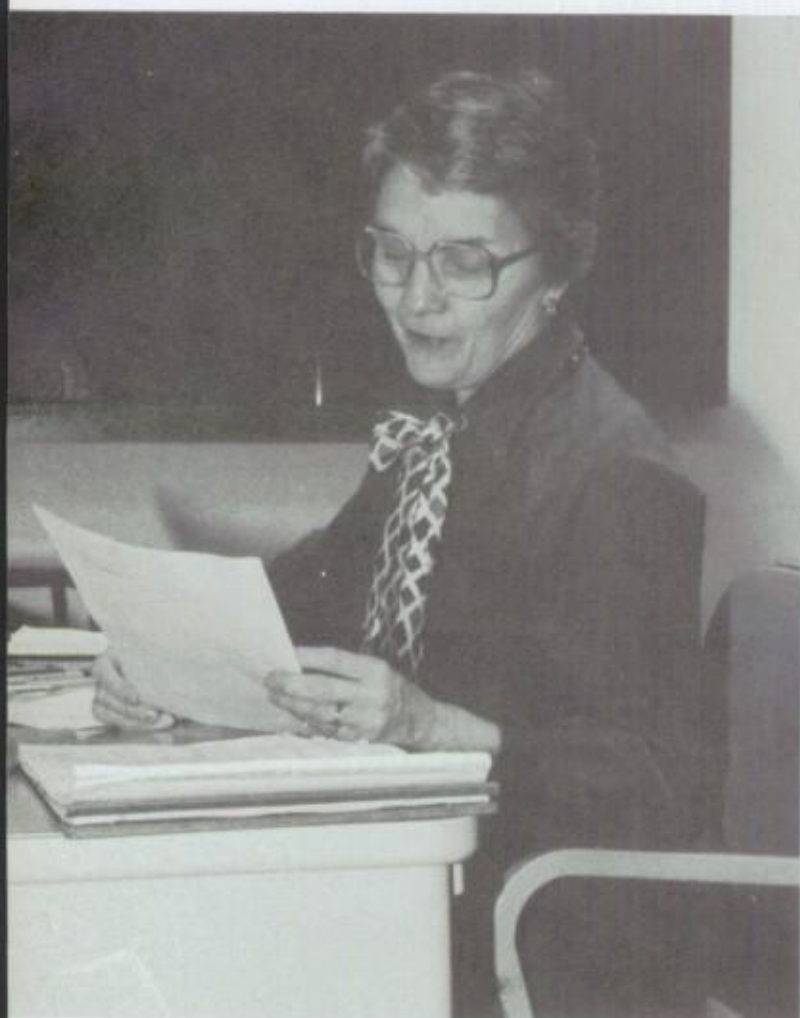

The South Side administration is headed by Mr. Jack E. Weicker, principal; Mr. Ralph Boling is assistant to the principal.

The Guidance Department, headed by Gordon, consists of Mrs. Frances Gooden, sophomore counselor and assistant athletic director; Miss Jennifer Manth, junior counselor, and Mrs. Jeanette Rohleder, senior counselor.

The importance of the counseling staff is always having willingness to help a student, whether one has a problem in scheduling, needs information for college, or just wishes to discuss something important.

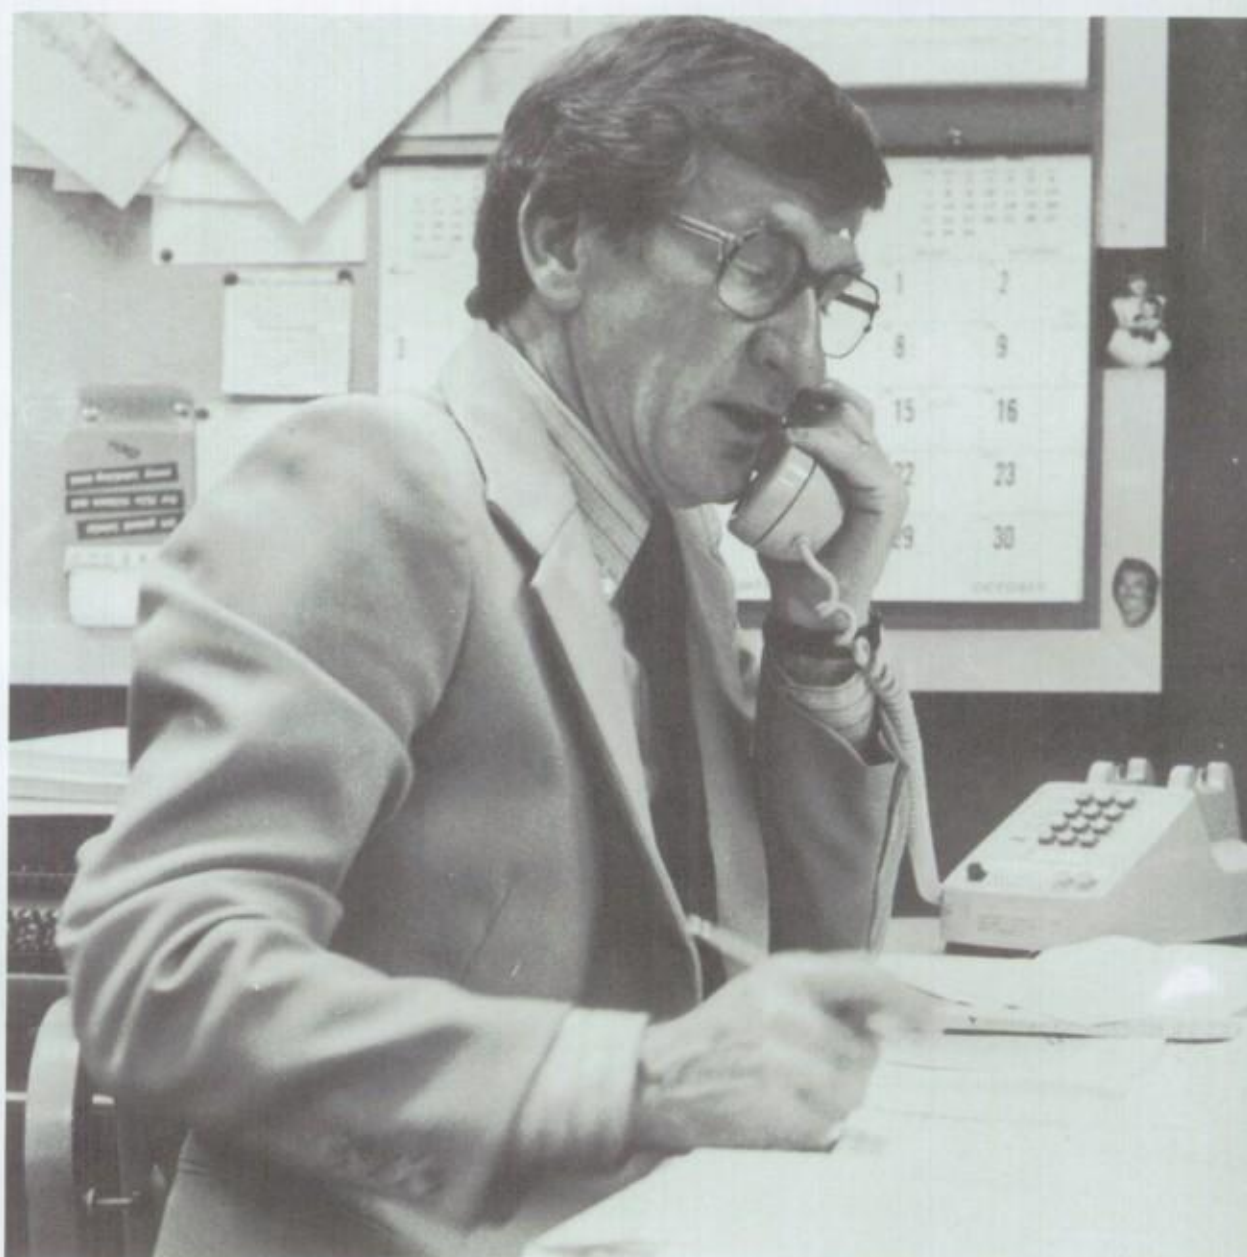

The administration is rounded out by Athletic Director Pres Brown, Mr. Richard Block, the assistant principal, and Miss Dorothy Walters, assistant to the principal.

In general, these people do their job in order to guarantee that South Side is a place students can enjoy being while they learn.

The Dirty Work

South Side owes its excellent condition to its active custodial staff. The staff has a number of responsibilities to deal with. Heating and cooling the building would probably be two most appreciated jobs it does. However, not many realize the other challenges the custodians must face. After any in-school sporting event, the custodial staff sees to it that things are cleaned up. Any needed repairs within the school would be the duty of these dedicated workers. Mechanical and electrical problems are also tackled by the staff. The custodians' work is never complete. A member of the staff can always be found within the school no matter what time of the day or night. Many people take the custodial staff for granted. In any case, their presence will always be appreciated.

Teaching Students, Molding Futures

Throughout its history, South Side has had teachers who care about their students as well as their school.

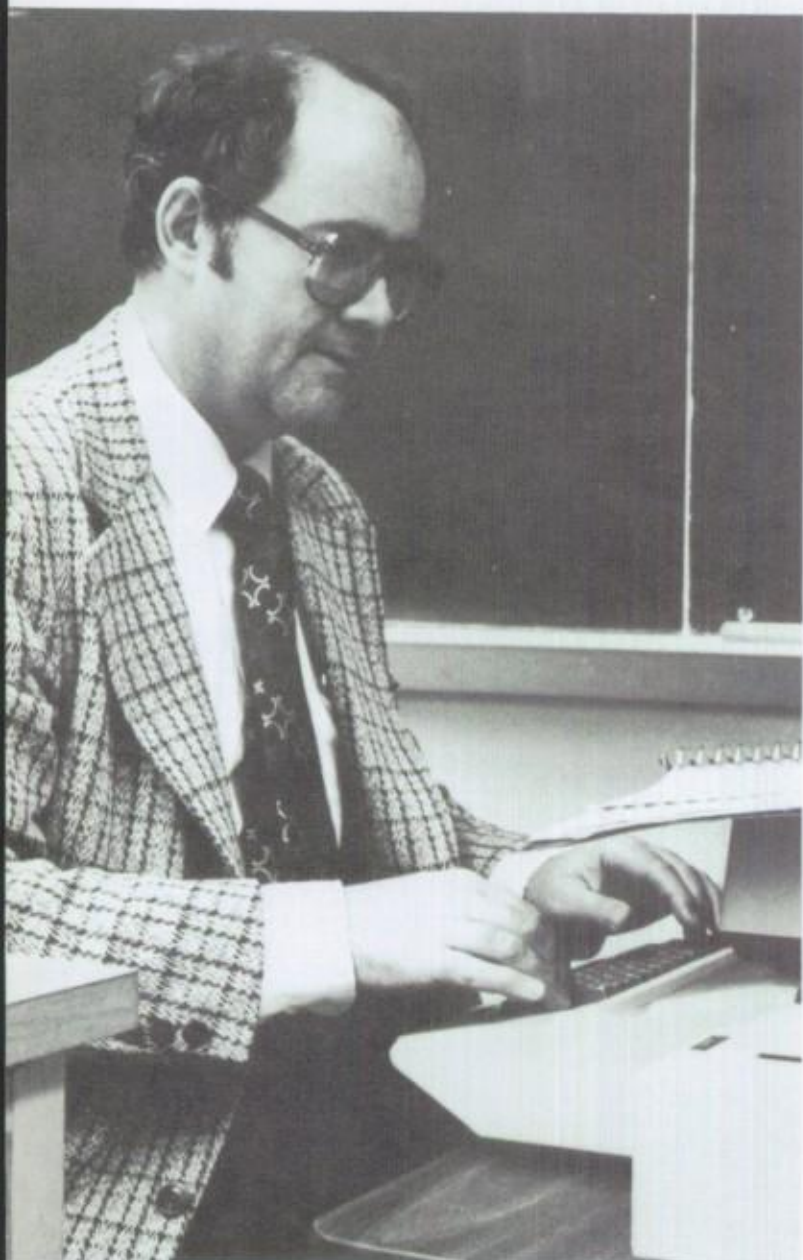

This care has been shown through the sponsorship of nearly every extracurricular activity that takes place at South Side. Though this sponsorship means constantly being available for these activities, our teachers are there.

The teachers at South Side also care about expanding their relationship with students. This is the reason that one will often see faculty members talking with students in the halls or giving them extra help on any problem students might bring to them.

The teachers at the head of departments take an added responsibility, making sure that everything is in order. The people heading their respective departments are Mr. Richard Sage, math; Mr. William Hedges, social studies; Miss Lois Holtmeyer, foreign language; Mrs. Jane Langdon, English; Mr. Gary Goodman, work study; Mr. David Griggs, science; Mrs. Juanita Mendenhall, home economics; Mr. Glen Stebing, physical education; Mr. Charlie Kuntz, industrial arts; Mr. Leon Dolby, business; and Mr. Robert Drummond, music.

These people, along with the entire staff, have done a great job again this year, and we're sure they will continue to help throughout the years to come.

There May Be Tears, But Smiles Describe Our Seniors' Year

The Class of 1983 finally made it to the top. Although we were first looked upon as "babies," being the first freshman class revived at South Side, we quickly adjusted and used that extra year here to become a class with a strong bond of fellowship and unity. We had an extra year to get the real feeling of being an Archer.

A true sense of loyalty was born in this class as we cheered on one another's accomplishments and helped each other through our rough times. We all wanted our class to excel. We maintained through our unity a respect for one another's individuality.

This last year was a time to appreciate all the friends we had made. "Senioritis" took hold quickly, and we had as much fun as we could because we knew our departure was near. It was a year for special memories of our last football game, our last Green and White Day, our last Homecoming, and our last Prom. Before we knew it, the Senior Play and Senior Banquet were here and gone, and Ivy Day slipped by, too.

We prepared to leave South Side confident that we will leave a positive impression. We will continue to leave good marks as we go our separate ways in the world to fulfill our dreams for it was here that our dreams began. We have the strength, the knowledge, and the confidence to become all that we wish to become, and we are proud to be the Class of 1983 at South Side High School.

Senior Class Officers

Elected at the beginning of the year, the senior class officers worked throughout the school year to plan and organize various senior events. From the start of the year, these students met once a week, working to pull together such events as the Prom, Senior Banquet, Senior play, and fund-raising. Gina Tiesca served as vice-president, Bonita Johnson as president, Phil GiaQuinta as treasurer, and Patti Leamon as secretary. The social committee consisted of Kris Kurtz, Sari Miller, and Karen Gemmer. Mrs. Jane Langon, Mr. Glen Stebing, and Mr. Allen Poorman sponsored the senior class and gave the officers the help and advice they needed.

The team's officers for the year
John Gevers, president; Mary

McKee, vice-president; and Mike Gemmer, secretary. All of the officers were seniors.

Over 45 members of the team participated in the events of boys' and girls' extemp, duo, impromptu, drama, humor, oratorical interpretation, original oratory, radio, poetry, and discussion.

After reaching a meet, the Archers' time was divided between going to rounds and waiting for the posting of their scores for each round. Then around 3:00 p.m. everyone flocked into the awards ceremony to find out how each had placed.

Class Of '84

One Step Closer

Having made it to its third year, the junior class was much more confident in itself as a verified group of Archers. No one could deny the right of the juniors to wear green and white proudly.

Their enthusiasm came on strong as they arose to cheer during each pep session and game.

One aspect of junior life was the "dreaded" term paper required of many junior students. Juniors also found time to participate in such social clubs as Hi-Y and Philo, which are two clubs open only to juniors and seniors.

The junior year is a busy one as those students fortunate enough to have jobs readjust their schedules in order to find the time for homework, athletics, and fun.

Although as the years go on, students find that more is expected of them, they also find that they gain the privileges which go along with the responsibilities.

The prom provides an excellent conclusion to each junior year. As juniors were able to participate in the planning of it, many will never forget the experience of the prom.

Looking ahead to 1984, the juniors will continue to grow together as they return to South Side for their final year in high school, seniors at last.

Junior Officers Set Goals

Representing the Junior Class, Dave Osterman, treasurer, Jordan Lebamoff, president, Patty Panyard, secretary, and Dan Bromley, vice-president (left) worked on ideas and provided fund-raising activities throughout the year. Mr. Earl Weinert and Mr. Ronald Fecher also helped the class by sponsoring the junior officers.

Lebamoff said, "Our main goal for the year is to get the class ready for their senior year. I feel we are already a very united class; so now we, as officers, want to concentrate on raising money in order to be prepared for our senior year."

Sophs Cross Bridge

The class of 1985 is well on its way, having successfully made it through half the high school years. As sophomores, they were the babies of the school no longer. They found greater expectations were held for them at the same time that they were gaining new status and confidence in themselves.

The sophomore year is for most a year of growing, learning, and being patient. The year is a long one, but the time spent is guaranteed to help as time passes and the sophomores become juniors and seniors.

For many, the long-awaited sixteenth birthday takes place during the sophomore year. As many sophomores take to the road, they find the new freedom to be great, not without responsibilities.

As sophomores, the class of '85 no longer felt overwhelmed by the prospect of South Side and its two hundred students. They took a greater part in many sports and activities, as well as helping to lead the way for the freshmen.

All in all, the sophomore year is a bridge between being the youngest in school and making one's way to being an upperclassman.

Computer Interest Grows

One aspect of the math department offered to students in any grade is the computer programming class. Here Patrick Holtzer, senior, and Brian Fuelling, junior, use one of the computers.

With computers becoming such an important part of our society, these classes can offer a strong basis for a future job.

Presently at South Side there are five terminals in the computer lab. Four of these are Hewlett Packard and one is an Apple. This year approximately 50 students at South Side are involved in these classes.

Frosh Proven Worthy

The word "freshman" conjures up a very definite picture: small, confused, terrified, and somewhat out of it. Every one, at sometime during his or her first year in high school, has felt just like this.

Seniors seem to be giant tyrants, just waiting for the chance to step on, and squash, an unsuspecting freshman.

The hallways, understood by all others, can become an endless maze full of "wrong rooms."

Yet sooner or later, the freshman class of 1983 began to relax and look around at all that South Side has to offer.

Freshman athletes worked hard and did very well, proving their potential for the years to come.

The freshman football team racked up five wins, as compared to only two losses, and took second place in the SAC. Freshmen have as much school spirit as anyone else with the freshman cheerleaders helping to gather support and enthusiasm for the teams.

For many, it was a year of settling priorities as students learned to juggle all the activities South Side has to offer with the perhaps less exciting but very important matter of class and studying.

◀ Rushing for a spot in the lunch line, Sam Gemple, freshman, smiles at the thought of an appetizing school lunch.

▼ Pete Myers, freshman, reads his biology assignment, intrigued by the mitosis of a tree frog's kidney cell.

▲ "May I take a message?" Chris Wesner, freshman, helps take phone messages in the attendance office during his study period.

◀ Lora Douglas, freshman, takes a seat in the hall in order to make up a test missed earlier in the week.

Asking an Archer friend some last-minute questions about a homework assignment, Julie Dorman, freshman, prepares to go home.

Years Remembered Through Memories

As it approaches the wee hours of the morning and we have just completed the last deadline for this year, we begin to think about the purpose of this book.

The hours spent pulling these pages together were more than hard work. Memories of friends, laughter, and pages that couldn't be found will remain with us forever. Such are the things that made this book as special to us as we hope it will be to you.

This year has slipped by just as quickly as the others in the past and as those to come. Years from now when we are separated, there will come a time when you begin to reminisce about old friendships that seem to have disappeared. It is then, when you pull this dusty Totem from your shelf and begin to flip through the pages, that we hope we have captured memories special to each person.

A Special Thank You To Watters Studio

A black and white photograph of a maple leaf with water droplets, surrounded by pine needles. The leaf is the central focus, with its veins clearly visible. It is covered in numerous small, glistening water droplets. The background is filled with the sharp, needle-like leaves of a pine tree, creating a textured, natural setting. The lighting is soft, highlighting the textures of both the leaf and the pine needles.

Yesterday is already a dream, and tomorrow is only a vision;
but today, well-lived,
makes every yesterday a dream of happiness,
and every tomorrow a vision of hope.
